JURY SELECTION BEGINS MONDAY IN CRANE TRIAL

KAREN STEIN
karen.stein@lee.net

GEORGETOWN, Ohio | Jury selection will begin Monday in Brown County Common Pleas Court in the trial of Robert Crane, accused of being culpable in his wife's death last year in Aberdeen.

Christine Dryden Crane, 41, who grew up in Manchester, died on March 17, 2011, from heroin toxicity, according to an autopsy report issued by the St. Elizabeth-Fort Thomas Medical Examiner's Office and released on April 19, 2011.

Robert Crane, 36, was arrested June 11, 2011, by the Brown County Sheriff's Office.

Robert Crane entered a not guilty plea to the 11 charges filed against him by a Brown County grand jury in June 2011. Those charges include first- and third-degree involuntary manslaughter, two counts of permitting drug abuse, two counts corrupting another with drugs, two counts of possession of heroin, possessing drug abuse instruments, complicity to trafficking in heroin and engaging in a pattern of corrupt activity, according to the indictment. The charges were the result of an investigation by the Brown County Sheriff's Office, according to the Brown County Prosecutor's office.

Robert Crane is in the Brown County Adult Detention Center awaiting trial.

A court filing by Jessica Little, Brown County prosecutor, included the criminal record for Robert Crane. The record included convictions in 2008, 2009, and 2010 for domestic violence as well as various other charges for felonious assault, criminal damaging, resisting arrest and OVIs in the past four years.

The couple had been married for almost four years at the time of Christine Crane's death.

Officials were unable to say how long they anticipate the trial will last.

Christine Tailer and Nicholas Ring are representing Robert Crane.

Coop bill becomes a law

WILL ALLOW CREATION OF NEW COOPS TO BRING IN NEW INVESTORS

marla.toncraj@lee.net

FRANKFORT | A new rural investment bill that could bring outside investors into Kentucky cooperatives has been signed into law.

House Bill 441 was signed earlier this week by Gov. Steve Beshear and was sponsored by Reps. Mike Denham, D-Maysville, Tom McKee, D-Cynthiana, and John Tilley, D-Hopkinsville. Denham serves as chairman of the House Agricultural and Small Business Committee.

The law is based on model legislation adopted in several states that allows cooperatives to have investors rather than only patrons.

"Project managers of energy, agriculture and natural resource projects have indicated to me that they need this tool in their toolbox," said Denham.

Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes, who is the state's chief business officer, said the law will offer new opportunities for investment while keeping the traditional tax advantages available in the state's existing coop statute.

Grimes said the legislation creates the ability for an entity to stimulate economic growth, an opportunity that isn't there now.

When the bill was approved by the House Agriculture and Small Business Committee in February, Denham said a potential biomass project in Bracken County sparked his interest in creating new generation cooperatives in Kentucky. The Bracken County project involves several biomass materials, according to Tom Malone, chairman of the steering committee charged with studying the feasibility of biomass products in the Buffalo Trace Region.

CINCINNATI | An airport considered vital to economic development in the Cincinnati and northern Kentucky region is striving to expand service and offset airline cutbacks that have caused concern in the region's business community.

Rising fuel costs that have led airlines to boost fares and airline consolidations reducing the number of carriers are other factors working against the Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky International Airport as it tries to attract low-cost carriers, get existing ones to expand service and persuade local residents to choose it over competing airports in Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio that are within a two-hour drive.

After 4-month surge, gas prices fall

CHRIS KAHN AND SANDY SHORE
Associated Press

NEW YORK | The worst is over, for now. Gasoline prices are starting to fall.

After a four-month surge pushed gasoline to nearly $4 per gallon in early April, drivers, politicians and economists worried that gasoline prices might soar past all-time highs, denting wallets, angering voters and dragging down an economy that is struggling to grow.

Instead, pump prices have dropped 6 cents over two weeks to a national average on Friday of $3.88. Experts say gasoline could fall another nickel or more next week.

Drivers might also get to say something they haven't since October 2009 — they're paying less at the pump than they did a year ago.

"It's nice, much more manageable," said Mark Timko, who paid less than $4 per gallon Wednesday in the Chicago suburb of Burr Ridge, Ill., for the first time since March. "I wasn't sure how high they were going to go this year."

NYC missing-boy case creates legal conundrum

COLLEEN LONG AND JENNIFER PELTZ
Associated Press

NEW YORK | For decades, the prominent case of a missing 6-year-old had a prime suspect: an admitted child molester in a Pennsylvania prison. Although the inmate was never criminally charged in Etan Patz' 1979 disappearance, he was found responsible in a wrongful-death lawsuit.

But investigators on Friday continued tearing up a Manhattan basement linked to someone else, a handyman who was recently re-interviewed by authorities. Through a lawyer, he denied having anything to do with Etan's vanishing, which helped turn missing children into a nationwide cause.

Authorities said they had yet to find any new evidence as of Friday, and the police commissioner and the FBI said they wouldn't discuss any possible suspects. It's unclear what the renewed probe may turn up, if anything.

But if it leads definitively away from Pennsylvania prisoner Jose A. Ramos and to someone else, it could create a legal conundrum: one person held accountable for the boy's death in civil court while another became the focus of a criminal case.

On Friday, investigators were using jackhammers and saws to carefully break through the basement's concrete floor, pulling the rubble out and carrying it out of the building with gloved hands, as an anthropologist stood by in case any human remains were found.

The debris was to be taken elsewhere and tested, a process that could last into next week, chief police spokesman Paul Browne said.

Police were using a chemical that can spotlight traces of blood and expected that X-ray equipment could help them peer behind walls, though some walls were being removed, Commissioner Raymond Kelly said.

"We're hopeful that we can bring some level of comfort to the parents, perhaps find some — obviously, the body of this poor child — but evidence that may lead to a successful investigation in this case," Kelly said. He was a lieutenant working on organized crime cases when Etan (pronounced AY'-tahn) vanished on the first day he was allowed to walk to his school bus stop alone.

As for whether authorities were optimistic, he said, "I really can't say."

The basement is in a building that was on Etan's way to the bus stop from the SoHo building where his parents still live. At the time, handyman Othniel Miller, who was friendly with the Patz family, was using the underground space as a workshop.

Miller, now 75, is cooperating with investigators and had "no involvement in this tragic event," his lawyer, Michael C. Farkas, told journalists gathered outside Miller's Brooklyn home on Friday.

Investigators decided to refocus their attention on the building after recently speaking again to Miller, whom they had interviewed several times over the years, according to a law enforcement official who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the investigation is ongoing.

Patz' parents, Stanley and Julie, posted a notice on their buzzer Friday telling reporters they wouldn't comment on the developments. A lawyer who has represented them is out of the country and didn't immediately respond to phone and email messages.

Among the first vanished children to appear on a milk carton, Etan became a symbol of a movement to draw attention to child safety — the day of his disappearance, May 25, became National Missing Children's Day.

The case has bedeviled investigators as leads emerged and fizzled over the years; Etan, never found, was officially declared dead in 2001.

GAS

FROM A1

Gasoline prices are lower than they were a year ago in 11 states, according to the Oil Price Information Service. At $3.88, the national average is still high, but it's down from a peak of $3.94. Predictions of $5 gasoline earlier this year have — mercifully — evaporated.

Tom Kloza, publisher and chief oil analyst at Oil Price Information Service, expects gasoline prices to drop to just above $3.80 by late next week. Stuart Hoffman, chief economist at PNC Financial Services Group, said the falling prices will put more money into the economy for Americans to spend elsewhere.

A 10-cent drop in gasoline prices would mean drivers would have an extra $37 million per day to spend on other things.

Gasoline prices have been pushed high by crude prices that have averaged $104 per barrel this year. World oil demand is expected to set a record this year and a series of production outages around the world have kept supplies low.

Oil rose to $110 as the West tightened sanctions on Iran in an effort to make it harder for that country to sell oil and pressure it to abandon its nuclear ambitions. Fears that retaliation by Iran could disrupt Middle Eastern supplies pushed oil prices up by as much as $15 per barrel, experts say.

Closer to home, there were concerns about restricted supplies of gasoline on the East Coast after three refineries closed and two more were set to be shuttered. Gasoline futures prices, which are quickly reflected in pump prices, rose to their highest levels in nearly a year.

But several factors have contributed to the lower prices at the pump:

— Oil prices have fallen in recent weeks. Iran and the West are negotiating, the growth in demand for oil has moderated, and world oil supplies are rising again thanks to more production from Saudi Arabia, Libya and the United States. Oil has fallen to $103.05 per barrel, down from a peak of $110.55 on March 1.

— Potential buyers for the two East Coast refineries have emerged, so they are now expected to stay open.

— U.S. drivers have gotten frugal at the gas pump. Gasoline demand has dropped by about 6 percent, compared with the same period last year, according to the latest government data.

In response, gasoline futures have since dropped by 8 percent. That's expected to cut the price of wholesale gasoline, and those savings will be passed on at the pump.

Prices are not expected to plummet. Even if the Iran situation were to totally resolved — an unlikely event — analysts say oil would not fall much below $90 per barrel.

And there's a possibility prices could still reverse themselves. Hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico, inflamed Middle East tensions or fighting in a major oil-producing country like Iran or Nigeria could reduce supplies. A surge in world economic growth could increase demand.

Gasoline prices rise nearly every spring, and often peak in May.

This year, they're falling a little earlier, and motorists are already making summer vacation plans.

Timko was going to take the train to Washington, D.C., this June with his wife. With gas prices down by about 40 cents per gallon — and more importantly below $4 — in their neighborhood, they've decided to drive instead.

"Under $4 makes a big difference," he said. "Just from a perception standpoint."

AIRPORT

FROM A1

The Cincinnati airport

had long been considered a major draw for corporations to locate in the area because of the large number of flights available when the Delta Air Lines hub there was flourishing, but that has changed in recent years. Chiquita Brands International noted last year in announcing it was moving to Charlotte, N.C., that a key factor in the decision was the greater access to foreign flights in and out of Charlotte's airport and the assortment of those flights.

Flight cutbacks by the Cincinnati airport's dominant carrier have drastically reduced the number of daily flights at the airport, where there are about 170 a day, compared with around 600 daily in 2005. The Cincinnati hub's role also was diminished as Delta acquired additional hubs after merging with Northwest Airlines in 2007.

"Given what's going on these days in the airline industry, we know we aren't going to have huge increases ever again," Steve Stevens, president and chief executive officer of the Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, said Thursday. "But we have to work on the incremental increases we can do."

Stevens' group has been collaborating with the Cincinnati USA Regional Chamber and the Cincinnati Business Committee, a group of Fortune 500 companies in the area, to help find ways of boosting air service to the area. The groups last year commissioned a study of what businesses want and need in terms of service and those efforts are continuing.

Airport chief executive Candace McGraw also has been spreading the message in the community about the airport's goal of "reinventing" itself to become more efficient and attractive to passengers and airlines. A $31 million project announced last year will include the reopening next month of a refurbished concourse closed in 2010 and improvements and enhancement to passenger areas.

THEFTS DECREASE
IN FIRST QUARTER

KAREN STEIN

karen.stein@lee.net

ABERDEEN, Ohio | Thefts in the village of Aberdeen have shown a marked decrease from last year's numbers for the first quarter of 2012, Police Chief Clark Gast said Friday.

"The decrease is a result of several factors, including the increase in better relations and trust between the police department and the citizens of the village. And we have been proactive in combating illegal drug activity. Since most thefts are unfortunately part of the criminal pattern in dealing with drug trafficking and addiction... then the thefts will decrease as we continue to strengthen our undercover drug investigations," Gast said.

"My Police Clerk Bernice

Jones and I have been tallying numbers ... there were 70 thefts offenses last year, while only 16 so far this year. The numbers have been decreasing due to an increase in our undercover drug investigations and the diligence of Officers Goodwin, Disney, Herrera and Sgt. Newman," Gast said.

When Gast began working for the village police department in Aberdeen in 2009, the theft reports were almost daily, he said.

"There wasn't a week that didn't go by that we didn't have several thefts ... since then the council has approved a budget that allows for 24-hour police coverage. Now the thefts continue to decrease," Gast said.

TURKEY SEASON BEGINS
MONDAY IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Ohio | Despite the decrease in new turkey hatchlings again this year, turkey hunting season in Ohio will begin Monday.

The low count is because of record high rainfall and flooding, according to the Ohio Department of Natural Resources.

Typically in southern Ohio, hens start incubating eggs on May 1, according to wildlife reports. The entire population is more than 180,000 in Ohio.

Hunters harvested 18,162 wild turkeys during last year's youth and spring turkey seasons.

A special youth-only turkey hunt begins Saturday, April 21 and ends Sunday. Young hunters must be accompanied by a non-hunting adult at least 18 years old. Hours are between a half-hour before sunrise to sunset on Saturday and Sunday.

Ohio hunters must report their turkey harvest by contacting www.wildohio.com, or calling 877-824-4864.

Prescription drug

FRANKFORT | Responding to an epidemic of prescription drug abuse, Kentucky lawmakers passed a measure Friday that political leaders hope will help change the stark reality that more people are dying from overdoses than car wrecks in the state.

A compromise bill approved by the House and Senate would require all physicians in the state to use a prescription drug monitoring system so they can more readily determine if new patients are actually addicts seeking the painkillers and anti-anxiety drugs that so many Kentuckians have gotten hooked on.

FRANKFORT | A $4.5 billion transportation budget that will pave highways, build bridges and expand airports across Kentucky received final approval in the Kentucky Senate on Friday.

The Senate voted 37-1 to pass the appropriations measure after removing a contentious amendment that would have restored nearly $50 million in road construction projects vetoed by Gov. Steve Beshear.

The measure provides money for hundreds of major road improvements across the state, including partial funding for a $2.6 billion project to build two bridges across the Ohio River in Louisville. It also sets aside $100 million to widen I-65 through three counties where numerous fatal traffic accidents have occurred in recent years.

Capt. Lloyd Patten of the MV Delta Mariner testifies Thursday during a Coast Guard hearing in Paducah into the ship's crash into the Eggners Ferry Bridge over Kentucky Lake in late January. The Coast Guard is hosting the week-long hearing at Paducah City Hall.

Ship commander: Navigation lights caused collision

PADUCAH | The master of a ship that struck a bridge over Kentucky Lake blamed the wreck on incorrect navigation lighting on the span over Kentucky Lake.

The Paducah Sun reported Capt. Lloyd Patten, who commanded the MV Delta Mariner, testified before a U.S. Coast Guard hearing in Paducah on Thursday.

"If the bridge had been lighted correctly, none of us would be here today," Patten said. "In my view, this was the main cause of the accident."

The collision on Jan. 26 caused no deaths or injuries, but collapsed one section of the Eggner's Ferry Bridge that connects the western shore of the lake to the Land Between the Lakes recreation area.

Patten went to the mess deck for a cup of coffee and went to the pilot house to check on the ship's position and his men. Coming from a lighted mess deck to the darkened pilot house on a winter's night deprived him of night vision temporarily, he said. He arrived at the pilot house about three minutes before impact.

"I was there about 10 seconds when I saw the lighted span," Patten said.

Patten said the ship was about a half-mile from the bridge when he entered the pilot house. In response to questioning, Patten said dropping anchor could have caused it to strike a bridge pier.

Spivey Gault, the attorney for pilot-adviser Capt. William Collins, asked Patten what would happen if the ship attempted the evasive maneuver any later than that moment.

Patten said the vessel could fail to complete a 180-degree turn needed and possibly collide with the bridge pier broadside.

GE inventor in Ohio awarded more than 100 patents

ROBERT L. SMITH
Associated Press

CLEVELAND | Fountains soar and lawns stretch bright and green at Nela Park, the historic research campus in East Cleveland, where General Electric engineers design the lighting systems of tomorrow.

Walkways lead to stately Georgian-style structures but also to utilitarian buildings, like the red-brick Technology Building. On its second floor, in a cluttered nook not much bigger than an office cubicle, Louis Nerone endeavors to build a better light bulb.

At 62, he throws himself into that task with curiosity, passion and an astonishing knack for invention.

During his quarter century at GE, Nerone has averaged about four patents a year, although last year he tallied eight. His colleagues brought in a cake and even the maintenance staff celebrated when, in December, he was awarded his 100th patent.

GE's most prolific inventor recently reacted to patent number 106 with trademark modesty.

"I see myself as part of a team," he said. "I don't invent anything here by myself."

Maybe not. But on a campus where the specter of Thomas Edison looms, people intone the name Nerone with similar awe and respect.

"Lou's one in a million," said Dennis Bradley, GE's technology manager for LED innovation and Nerone's direct supervisor.

"There's probably a handful of guys in the company with his technical depth," he said, and few in history with his record of achievement.

Most of Nerone's work is hidden from view. He tinkers with the electronic guts of lighting systems, divining innovations that make lights burn brighter, softer, longer, or more efficiently.

Patent number 100, for example, came for a "dimming ballast" for a fluorescent lamp. To demonstrate what he did, Nerone points to the fluorescent light box above his head. His engineering softens the electric light when natural light is abundant.

A second quality, which he calls parallel operation, allows three fluorescent tubes to burn on when the fourth tube has burned out.

This April 4, photo shows General Electric lighting engineer Louis Nerone at Nela Park in East Cleveland, Ohio. During his quarter century at GE, Nerone has averaged about four patents a year, although last year he tallied eight. His colleagues brought in a cake and even the maintenance staff celebrated when, in December, he was awarded his 100th patent.

Previously, one bad lamp broke the circuit and darkened the set.

"If you go into Walmart and look up and see a lamp out, and all the other lamps are lit, that's ours," he said.

He's a slight, brisk, talkative man who views the world through large wire-rimmed glasses. He ranks a private office, where a framed copy of Thomas Edison's 1879 patent application for an incandescent light bulb adorns a wall. But most often he can be found in the electronics laboratory, at a workbench strewn with tweezers, wire cutters and soldering guns.

From such venerable hardware comes the state of the art. Nerone picks up an experimental bulb illuminated by light-emitting diode, or LED, and predicts the finished product will burn for about 15 years.

"You can put this in your house and forget about it," he said.

Typically, an invention springs from a problem needing a solution.

A product manager might stop by and report that a customer is unhappy with the way a lighting system is working, or not working. Or a colleague may point out a challenge that has arisen in a new design.

"I try to think of a way to solve the problem," he said. "Then you test it out. You find out what works best."

A patent review board, on site, decides whether to send the next Nerone idea on to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. The company will own the patent. Nerone gets only accolades and a stipend, or bonus, for each invention.

It's reward enough, he said.

Sometimes, the "Aha!" moment comes on his long drive home to Brecksville. He can't wait to get to the lab the next day to test his idea.

"If it works, that's the part that's cool. That's a big moment," he said. "It's like playing golf. You get that one good shot, it brings you back to the next game."

The penchant for engineering began in boyhood. He still recalls the thrill he felt when he built his first crystal radio set for a Cub Scout project. Grounded to a drain pipe in his family's garage on West 114th Street, the simple machine pulled in three Cleveland radio stations.

PASSED

FROM A3

"When nearly three Kentuckians are dying every day from drug overdoses, we must cast aside our political party preferences and work together to find solutions to help our suffering families and communities," Gov. Steve Beshear said in a statement. "Our legislature has done just that."

The measure passed the House 68-19 and the Senate 26-11 on Friday, shortly before lawmakers concluded a five-day special legislative session.

The House had pressed to give the attorney general control of the monitoring system so investigators could more easily identify and arrest unscrupulous doctors who overprescribe painkillers. In a compromise, that system was left in the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services where it had been since its inception.

However, the measure includes language that will allow the attorney general and other law enforcement agencies to get information from the monitoring system to assist in criminal investigations.

Also dropped from the compromise bill was a proposed fee that doctors would have had to pay to maintain the drug monitoring program, known as KASPER. The House had wanted to require each licensed physician in the state to pay $50 a year.

The Kentucky Medical Association had opposed the fee as "a provider tax" on physicians. The group also opposed the push to put the attorney general in charge, saying that would allow staffers in that office broad access to private medical information that should be available only to physicians and other medical professions.

A bloc of House GOP lawmakers who opposed the measure had raised concerns this week about investigators from the attorney general office's essentially looking over the shoulders of the state's physicians. They argued it could negatively affect patients who have a legitimate need for painkillers or anti-anxiety drugs.

"Special interests fought to limit law enforcement access to data," said Attorney General Jack Conway in a statement. "... I remain perplexed why some lobbying interests remained so resistant in light of the magnitude of this epidemic that is killing three people in our commonwealth every day."

The legislation also requires any new pain clinics that open in Kentucky to be owned by physicians licensed in the state.

Beshear called the special legislative session for lawmakers to act on the prescription abuse bill and said he's thrilled with its passage.

"Even though the final version of the prescription drug bill doesn't include every element we had hoped, it is an enormous bipartisan accomplishment, and it restores Kentucky as a leading state in innovative tactics in battling prescription drug abuse," he said.

BUDGET

FROM A3

A crash on a rural stretch of the highway near Munfordville in 2010 killed 11 people, 10 of them members of a Mennonite family and a truck driver whose tractor-trailer crossed the median and struck their van.

To get final passage Friday afternoon, the Senate removed an amendment that would have funded 10 smaller projects that the Democratic governor had vetoed in a district represented by Beshear's chief Republican rival, Senate President David Williams. Williams made the motion to drop that amendment after sharply criticizing Beshear for vetoing the road improvements in his southern Kentucky district.

"It was just an act of vindictiveness, of defiance, and maybe he's gotten it out of his bloodstream," Williams said.

Independent state Sen. Bob Leeper of Paducah, chairman of the Senate Appropriations and Revenue Committee, said Williams had been unfairly singled out by Beshear.

Leeper proposed the amendment to add funding for the projects in the transportation budget. It passed the Senate, was rejected by the House, and later removed by the Senate.

As leaders in their respective parties, Williams and Beshear have been at odds for years. Beshear has pushed unsuccessfully to oust Williams as Senate president by trying to elect enough Democrats to overturn the GOP majority. Beshear has even appointed Republican senators to lucrative positions outside the Legislature to create potential openings for Democrats.

Despite those efforts, Republicans have maintained control of the Senate and have kept Williams as their leader.

Lawmakers have been meeting in a special legislative session since Beshear called them back to Frankfort on Monday to pass the transportation budget. The measure had been left hanging when the regular annual legislative session ended last week.

The Senate had refused to pass the transportation budget until Beshear signed the road construction plan. Neither side was willing to budge before time ran out in the regular session.

Beshear blamed Williams, saying his inaction forced the special session that has cost $300,000 so far.

The legislation is House Bill 2.

"I want residents to feel they are getting excellent service for their 1 percent tax they pay to the village," Gast said.

"Our goal is to make the citizens feel safe, and that Aberdeen is a village where they can raise a family and start a business," he said. Village officers routinely check businesses after closing, to make sure doors remain locked and there are no fire hazards nearby, he said.

Just recently, an Aberdeen police officer saved the life of a resident, Gast said.

"Because the department was so close by, Sgt. Newman was able to get there quickly. The 911 dispatcher had been coaching the husband about how to perform CPR on his wife when Newman arrived. Because he carries a debilitation is his car, he was able to shock her heart back to beating again. The electronic defibrillator unit will not work unless the patient is in cardiac arrest. The life squad personnel and 911 communications also did a great job. That lady is alive today because of everyone's quick reactions and training," Gast said.

In Aberdeen's mayor's court this quarter, there were 19 misdemeanors, 15 felony arrests, and the 16 theft offenses, according to village reports.

The police department is also cleaning up the village by assuring every vehicle must be capable of running or have a current license tag, unless it is exempt because the vehicle is part of a business, Gast said.

He acknowledged the possibilities of severe damage to the vessel, injury or death of crewmen, destroying the bridge pier, or sinking the vessel.

The ship's third mate, Capt. Franklin Altany, said as his ship approached the Eggner's Ferry Bridge, the crew of another boat questioned whether the Delta Mariner met the clearance requirements of the span.

The Murray Ledger & Times reported) that Altany said the pilot answered the radio, and also shone a spotlight on the bridge.

"We just have clearance (readings) for the one span, and that looked like the span," said Altany.

Actor Jonathan Frid dies at 87

ROB GILLIES
Associated Press

TORONTO | Jonathan Frid, a Canadian actor best known for playing Barnabas Collins in the 1960s original vampire soap opera "Dark Shadows," has died. He was 87.

Frid died Friday of natural causes in a hospital in his home town of Hamilton, Ontario, said Jim Pierson, a friend and spokesman for Dan Curtis Productions, the creator of "Dark Shadows."

Frid starred in the 1960s gothic-flavored soap opera about odd, supernatural goings-on at a family estate in Maine.

His death comes just weeks before a Tim Burton-directed version of Dark Shadows is due out next month starring Johnny Depp as Barnabas Collins. Frid has a cameo role in the new movie in which he meets Depp's character in a party scene with two other original actors from the show.

Pierson said Burton and Depp were fans of Frid, who played a vulnerable vampire in one of the first sympathetic portrayals of the immortal creatures.

"Twenty million people saw the show at its peak in 1969. Kids ran home from school and housewives watched it. It had a huge pop culture impact," Pierson said.

Pierson said Frid, whose character was added in 1967, saved the show and stayed on until the end of its run in 1971. He said Frid was never into the fame and fortune and just wanted to be a working actor. He said he loved the drama and finding the flaws and the humanity in his characters.

"That's why he had this vampire that was very multidimensional. It really set the trend for all these other things that have been done with vampires over the last 40, 50 years," Pierson said. "Vampires were not in the vernacular. In 1967, there wasn't a pop culture of vampire stuff, so here he was in this mainstream network show that aired at 4 P.M. that really took off. And then he did the movie which was also a big hit."

Frid had been an accomplished stage actor before "Dark Shadows" made him famous. The show has lived on in reruns.

Stuart Manning, editor of the online "Dark Shadows News Page," said Frid brought a new dimension to the role of the vampire by injecting the role with depth and a sense of regret for his immortal existence.

"Now that idea has been taken many times since — 'Twilight' uses it, shows like 'True Blood,' 'Buffy' — which again I think shows the influence 'Dark Shadows' has had," said Manning, who worked with Frid as a writer on the 2010 "Dark Shadows" audio drama spinoff, "The Night Whispers."

The youngest of three sons, Frid served in the Royal Canadian Navy during the Second World War. After graduating from Hamilton's McMaster University, he got a degree in directing at the Yale School of Drama and studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London.

In this 1970 file photo originally released by ABC, Jonathan Frid, from "Dark Shadows," is shown. Frid, a Canadian actor best known for playing Barnabas Collins in the 1960s original vampire soap opera "Dark Shadows," has died. He was 87. Frid died Friday of natural causes in a hospital in his home town of Hamilton, Ontario, said Jim Pierson, a friend and spokesman for Dan Curtis Productions, the creator of "Dark Shadows."

Frid starred in various theater productions with illustrious actors including Katharine Hepburn. But it was his turn in "Dark Shadows" and its first feature film adaptation, "House of Dark Shadows," that made him a commercial success and kept him busy throughout his career with reunions, fan events and dramatic readings.

He lived in New York for several decades before moving back to Canada in the '90s. His other credits include the 1973 TV movie "The Devil's Daughter," co-starring Shelley Winters, and Oliver Stone's directorial debut, "Seizure." He also starred in the Broadway revival and national tour of "Arsenic and Old Lace" in the '80s.

Pierson said Frid been in declining health in recent months. At Frid's request, there was no funeral and there will be no memorial.

"He really was kind of a no-fuss guy," Pierson said. Frid never married. He is survived by a nephew, Donald Frid.

Men at Work musician Greg Ham found dead

KRISTEN GELINEAU

SYDNEY | Greg Ham, a member of the Australian band Men at Work whose saxophone and flute punctuated its smash 1980s hits, was found dead in his Melbourne home on Thursday.

Police said the death did not appear to be suspicious, though the cause was not immediately known. A friend who found Ham's body said he hadn't been the same since 2010, when a court ruled that his signature flute riff from the song "Down Under" had been stolen from a classic campfire song.

Victoria state police confirmed that the deceased was the 58-year-old resident of Ham's house but did not identify him by name, in keeping with local practice. Ham was 58 and neighbors said he was the lone occupant of the house.

Men at Work topped charts around the world in 1983 with the songs "Down Under" and "Who Can It Be Now?" and won a Grammy Award that year for Best New Artist.

Frontman Colin Hay issued a statement expressing deep love for Ham, whom he met in 1972 when they were seniors in high school. Hay recalled decades of shared experiences with Ham — from appearing on "Saturday Night Live," to flying through dust storms over the Grand Canyon, to getting lost in the rural Australian countryside.

"We played in a band and conquered the world together," Hay said. "I love him very much. He's a beautiful man. ... He's here forever."

Two concerned friends who had not heard from Ham in some time found his body after going to check on him, police said.

Local pharmacist David Nolte, who had known Ham for 30 years, told The Associated Press on Friday that he and another friend found his body. He said the musician's cats were outside the house and appeared unfed, and all calls had gone to Ham's voice-mail for days.

Mexico volcano spews glowing rock, tower of ash

MARK STEVENSON
Associated Press

XALITZINTLA, Mexico | A 17,886-foot volcano outside Mexico City exhaled dozens of towering plumes of ash and shot fragments of glowing rock down its slopes Friday morning, frightening the residents of surrounding villages with hours of low-pitched roaring not heard in a decade.

A roiling white cloud of ash, gas, water vapor and superheated rock spewed from the cone of Popocatepetl high above the village of Xalitztintla, whose residents said they were awakened by a warning-rattling series of eruptions. Mexico's National Disaster Prevention Center said that a string of eruptions had ended in the early morning, then started up again at 5:05 a.m., with at least 12 in two hours.

"Up on the mountain, it feels incredible," said Aaron Sanchez Ocelotl, 45, who was in his turf grass fields when the eruptions happened. "It sounds like the roaring of the sea."

The white cone of Popo, as most call the mountain, is an iconic backdrop to Mexico City's skyline on clear days, but its 40 miles (65 kilometers) distance means even a moderately large eruption is unlikely to do more than dump ash on one of the world's largest metropolitan areas. It's a different matter for the villages on the flanks of the volcano, where the quiet of the corn fields and fruit orchards was pervaded by the volcano's spooky roaring.

"Everyone needs to take this seriously. This buzzing, this roaring isn't normal," said Gregorio Fuentes Casquera, the assistant mayor of Xalitztintla, a village of 2,600 people about seven miles from the summit. He said the town had prepared 50 buses and was sending out its six-member police forces to alert people to be ready to evacuate.

He said he believed about half the populace would be willing to evacuate, while the rest would want to stay.

Dozens of women lined up in Xalitztintla's main square to get free face masks and bottles of water. Health authorities were giving out 10 masks and 10 bottles of water to each family, and the surgical-style masks, intended to filter out the fine ash released by the volcano, were becoming common among the town's students, who are required to wear them in school. Few adults wore them.

"Right now we're not scared. When it's scary is at night, when it's putting out lava," said Nancy Agustin Inclan, 14, as she removed her mask and took a break outside the gate of the town's middle school.

President Felipe Calderon said live on national television that authorities are keeping open roads around the mountain, preparing emergency shelters and making sure residents know the latest information about a potential eruption.

Leon Analco Analco, 83, chopped corn stalks with a machete as he related some residents' plans to simply move to a shelter they'd constructed on a ridgeline about 200 feet higher than the rest of the village.

"This is a ravine. All the mud will run down here. It's dangerous," he said.

Webcam images on the site of the National Disaster Prevention Center showed the plume rising from the top of the peak at dawn, though clouds obscured the volcano for people further away. The Televisa television network broadcast images of red, glowing material rising from the crater and falling on its slopes.

Authorities this week raised the alert level due to increasing activity at the volcano, whose most violent eruption in 1,200 years occurred on Dec. 18, 2000.

The coordinator general for civil protection, Laura Gurza, told Televisa that officials were not yet ready to order any evacuations, but urged people living near the mountain to be "very, very attentive" to action at the volcano. She also urged them to gather important papers and to have their escape routes planned in case they have to leave.

The ash was blowing to the northeast, in the general direction of the city of Puebla.

Residents of Huejotzingo, 18 miles from the peak, went about the day as normal despite a magnificent plume of ash and water vapor. Luz Maria de Olate, 35, put her 5-year-old in a surgical mask because the teachers said the ash could damage children's lungs.

But like hundreds of other residents on the flank of the volcano, she doesn't fear an eruption. Neither did her son as they headed for school.

More Secret Service officers expected to lose jobs

ALICIA A. CALDWELL
AND KEN THOMAS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | At least three more Secret Service officers implicated in a prostitution scandal in Colombia were expected to lose their jobs Friday, a federal official told The Associated Press, as the Pentagon separately acknowledged that an 11th military person was involved.

The lawyer for two Secret Service supervisors said Friday that President Barack Obama's safety was never at risk and criticized leaks of internal government investigations in the case, signaling their strategy for an upcoming legal defense.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, the Secret Service briefed congressional officials behind closed doors about details in the scandal.

The disciplinary announcement expected later Friday would bring to six the number of Secret Service employees who no longer work for the agency in the wake of the scandal. The federal official spoke on condition of anonymity because this person was not authorized to disclose the news ahead of the announcement.

Eleven Secret Service employees were put on administrative leave last week following an incident in Colombia that involved at least some agency personnel bringing prostitutes to their hotel room. The scandal, which involves as many as 20 Colombian women, broke last week after a fight over payment between a prostitute and a Secret Service agent spilled into the hotel hallway. A 24-year-old Colombian prostitute told The New York Times that the agent agreed to pay her $800 for a night of sex but the next morning offered her only $30. She eventually left the hotel, she told the newspaper, after she was paid $225.

The scandal involved 11 officers and supervisors and at least 11 military members who were working on security before President Barack Obama arrived in Cartagena, Colombia, for the Summit of the Americas last week. The Pentagon acknowledged Friday that an 11th military person, a member of the Army, was implicated in the scandal.

The lawyer for ousted Secret Service supervisors David Chaney and Greg Stokes, Lawrence Berger of New York, said Friday that Obama's safety was never at risk and said leaks surrounding the ongoing investigations "distort the process."

Regardless of what happened inside hotel rooms, Berger said, they never jeopardized the president's security. Berger said he could not comment on the woman's claims about being paid for sex, but added, "I don't think anything she has said is material to any of the issues I am pressing with my clients."

"Nothing that has been reported in the press in any way negatively or adversely impacted the mission of that agency or the safety of the president of the United States," Berger said.

Chaney and Stokes were forced out of the agency Wednesday. A third agent, who has not been identified and was not a supervisor, resigned.

On Chaney's Facebook account, which was made inaccessible on Friday, Chaney joked that he was checking out former Republican vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin while he was protecting her in 2008.

The recent round of eruptions, which began in 1994, ended a period of decades in which the volcano was seen as peaceful, sleeping giant, and a tourism attraction.

Epifanio Inclan, 77, a farmer, recalled guiding tourists to the very crater of the volcano in the 1950s.

"They paid us a peso or two, and a peso meant something back then," he said. Making the day-long climb in huaraches, the young guides would play soccer near the top of the peak while tourists descended into the crater.

"I'm not afraid. He's my uncle," said Oscar Olate, expressing the personal relationship many in the Mexico Valley feel toward Popocatepetl, whose name means "smoking mountain" in the indigenous Nahuatl language of the Aztecs.

People view it with fondness, said street vender David Gorzo Navarro, 45.

"When the ash falls, it's like fertilizer," he said.

More than 30 million people live within view of the volcano, which sits at a point where the states of Mexico, Puebla, and Morelos come together. It has been erupting intermittently since December 1994.

Calderon said Mexicans are living in complicated times, given the 2009 swine flu outbreak and floods and drought this year.

Getting Paid to Talk

Today voice acting (voice over's) is everywhere, from commercials to audio books, training materials, documentaries, animation, telephone systems and even the internet. This single evening class takes a realistic and entertaining look at the positive and negative components of building success as a voice actor. The instructor will discuss both the creative and business aspects of the field. In addition to having the opportunity to hear voice acting demos from working professionals, each student will have the opportunity to record a real script under the direction of a producer right there in the class. Each student's recording is then played back at the end of the session as a class finale. Throughout the class students are encouraged to ask questions and the instructor is always willing to provide basic voice assessment to anyone attending.

Pitch Your Plan

You've got ideas. We want to hear them. Whether you want to start or boost a new business, expand an existing one, or develop a new product, your ideas deserve to be heard! The Maysville Regional Entrepreneur Center and Maysville Community & Technical College are committed to fostering an entrepreneurial spirit in our region. We share a vision of Maysville as an incubator for new businesses - small businesses that can grow our economy, provide jobs and opportunities, and encourage citizens to pursue and achieve academic goals. So if you have an idea for a new business or are interested in expanding your existing business, we want to help. That's where Pitch Your Plan comes in. This competition will award free rental space in the Cox building in downtown Maysville for one year,* for the winning entrepreneur to use as their primary business location. In addition, other worthy ideas will be eligible for reduced rental rates in various storefront locations in the area. The winner and other eligible businesses in the Pitch Your Plan competition will be able to establish or expand their business with significantly lowered overhead costs. In addition, they will receive free business support from the entrepreneur center. It's a big boost that can tip the scales in your favor as you undertake the challenges of business ownership. Once your plan is prepared, submit it, along with the Pitch Your Plan application, to the Maysville Regional Entrepreneur Center by June 1, 2012. Our judges will review the plans and select four of them to advance to the final competition. At that point, applicants will have the opportunity to give a presentation about their business and answer any questions the judges may have. Finally, judges will select one winning applicant to be awarded the Cox Building rental space and determine whether additional awards of reduced rate rental space will be granted. For more information contact Mike Jackson, Maysville Regional Entrepreneur Center 201 East Third Street Maysville Ky. 41056 or Email mike.jackson@kctcs.edu

Wines of Summer with Bill Sanders

We often hear that it is best to eat foods of the season. This is true with wine, too. The warmer weather of spring and summer offers backyard cookouts and lighter cuisine with fresh produce. We'll discuss and taste some new value-oriented gems to pair with your culinary favorites or for simply sitting around the pool or enjoying the sunset. Summer isn't just for white wine. We'll taste some fun and versatile red wines. Of course, it's not summer without food friendly Rosé. This class is all about the marriage of food and wine.

Congress begins uphill battle to pass farm bill

JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | The Senate has begun laying the groundwork for a half-trillion-dollar farm and food bill that would end unconditional subsidies to farmers, but House Republicans’ resolve to cut its biggest component — food stamps — by $13 billion a year dims its prospects of passing Congress.

The current five-year farm bill expires at the end of September, and the Senate’s agriculture committee on Friday released a draft of its plan to redesign safety nets that help farmers weather bad times while achieving some $23 billion in deficit reduction. The full committee is to vote next week on the plan, which consolidates conservation programs and takes several steps, such as stopping lottery winners from getting assistance, to make the food stamp program more accountable.

But before getting a bill to the president, lawmakers must satisfy multiple constituents with different agendas — northern corn growers, southern cotton farmers, insurance companies, banks, nutrition groups and environmentalists. Most difficult will be narrowing the gap between the Democratic Senate and House Republicans taking aim at the food stamp program that comprises some 80 percent of the bill’s spending.

Farmers are also cursed by their own successes. With farm incomes as high as they’ve been in decades, it’s harder to convince lawmakers that they still need strong protections for future disasters and market downturns.

Most give chances of success at no better than 50-50, which frustrates farm groups seeking some certainty in government policy. There’s still seven months to work on a bill before the presidential election, said Jon Doggett, vice president for public policy at the National Corn Growers Association. “Our membership is getting extremely concerned to hear members say we can’t pass a farm bill this year. There are a lot of growers who are really very angry.”

The Congressional Budget Office says that at the current spending pace the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or food stamps, would spend about $400 billion over the five-year life of a farm bill enacted this year. Crop insurance subsidies would average about $9 billion a year, commodity subsidies $6.6 billion and farm conservation programs $6.5 billion.

Last fall, when the congressional supercommittee was making its futile attempt to come up with a long-term deficit reduction plan, Senate agriculture committee chairman Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich., and her Republican colleague in the House, Frank Lucas of Oklahoma, came up with a plan to cut $23 billion from farm and food aid over the next decade while replacing direct payments to farmers with a new revenue insurance program. That plan is the framework as the agriculture committee’s draft of the massive bill that also includes such areas as energy, forestry, rural development and international food aid.

The Barack Obama administration in its budget proposal this year outlined a similar plan, calling for cuts of $32 billion and also eliminating direct payments, a subsidy that farmers collect based on a land’s production history but not connected to crop prices or yield.

But the GOP-led House sees farm and food aid as a prime source for deficit reduction, and the budget of Budget Committee chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., that cleared the House last month requires almost $180 billion in cuts from farm bill programs over the next decade. That included $134 billion, or an average $13.4 billion a year, from the food stamp or SNAP program.

As part of that, the House agriculture committee on Wednesday approved $7.7 billion in reductions for next year, or $33 billion over a decade, to the SNAP program to help avoid automatic cuts in defense and other programs next year.

Republicans argued that spending for SNAP, which has grown from 17 million recipients in 2001 to more than 46 million today, is bloated by waste and fraud and can be reduced without taking food away from the needy.

But Democrats are strongly opposed to anything more than marginal cuts to the food stamp program and saw the Ryan budget as a major deterrent to getting a farm bill this year. “Passing a farm bill this year was already going to be difficult but the Republican budget approved by the House today lowers the odds,” the top Democrat on the House agriculture committee, Collin Peterson of Minnesota, said after the budget vote.

“Farmers and ranchers are fiscally conservative and definitely want to contribute as much as they can to deficit reduction,” said Chandler Goule of the National Farmers Union. But he said the entire farm bill with nutrition is still only about 2 percent of the federal budget and farmers are already bearing more than their fair share with the $23 billion in cuts proposed last year. “The government needs to go somewhere else to find additional money ... that’s what our producers think,” he said.

House committee chairman Lucas voted for the Ryan budget, but said in a statement that he “would caution people about reading too much into the numbers or policy proposals in either the president’s budget or the Ryan budget .... They are only suggestions.” He stressed on Wednesday that his committee’s proposed cuts in SNAP “would improve its integrity so that families most in need can continue to receive nutrition assistance.”

The main focus of the Senate debate on the bill will be reaching a consensus on the future safety net for commodities. Direct payments, now costing $5 billion a year, are likely to be replaced with some form of “shallow loss” program that would pay farmers when modestly decreasing yields or declining prices result in a farmer’s revenue falling below historic averages.

For more serious losses, crop insurance kicks in. An average 60 percent of crop insurance premiums are subsidized by the government.

Corn and soybean farmers are strong advocates of this approach, which would help maintain their current economic prosperity, while southern growers of rice, cotton and peanuts prefer the more traditional counter-cyclical payments where target prices are set and farmers are compensated when those prices aren’t reached.

Pakistani plane carrying 127 crashes amid storm

ZARAR KHAN
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD | Emergency workers with flashlights searched the smoldering wreckage of a passenger jet carrying 127 people that crashed into a muddy wheat field Friday while trying to land in a violent thunderstorm at Islamabad's main airport.

The government said there appeared to be no survivors in the crash of the Boeing 737-200 near Benazir Bhutto International Airport — the second major air disaster in the Pakistani capital in less than two years.

Sobbing relatives of those aboard the Bhoja Air flight from Karachi to Islamabad rushed to airports in both cities for news of their loved ones.

One rescue official asked residents to bring sheets to cover the remains of the dead, and smashed seats and other wreckage was spread over a wide area near the airport, along with clothing and jewelry belonging to passengers.

Bhoja Air, a domestic carrier that has just four planes, only resumed operations last month after suspending them in 2001 due to financial difficulties.

Bhoja administrative director Javed Ishaq told reporters and relatives of those on board that the jet was in good condition and was brought down by “heavy winds.”

“The aircraft was in good shape. This came from God,” said Ishaq, speaking at the airport in Karachi, Pakistan’s largest city. As he spoke, relatives of those aboard who had come to the airport jeered him and demanded to be flown to Islamabad to collect the bodies of their loved ones.

The plane had been given clearance to land, said an air traffic controller who did not give his name because he was not authorized to speak to the media. A violent thunderstorm was lashing Islamabad at the time of the crash, about 6:40 p.m. local time.

“It was really bad weather for a flight,” said navy Capt. Arshad Mahmood, who lives near the crash site. “The pilot was forced to move down to avoid clouds that were generating the lightning and thunder.”

Islamabad police chief Bani Yameen said nobody on the ground was reported killed, “but apparently all on board perished.” Civil aviation officials also said survivors were highly unlikely, according to Defense Minister Chaudhry Ahmed Mukhtar.

“My brother’s wife was on board this flight,” said Naveed Khan. “We pray for the departed souls. What else can we do now?”

TV footage showed wreckage that included parts of what looked like an engine and a wing against the wall of a small building. Rescuers worked in the dark, with many using flashlights as they combed the area. Fleets of ambulances arrived later, their lights flashing in the gloom.

Several farmers threshing wheat in the field nearby said they saw the aircraft burst into flames when it hit the ground.

“The flames leapt up like they were touching the sky,” said Mohammad Zubair.

The army declared an emergency and cordoned off the crash site.

“I saw nothing but body parts and twisted metal on the ground when I reached the scene,” said resident named Mustafa, who did not identify himself further.

He said residents collected the remains of the dead “and bundled them in cloth sheets like we collect grain.”

In a statement, the Boeing Co. extended its condolences to the families of the victims and offered technical assistance to Pakistan’s Civil Aviation Authority in investigating the crash.

The last major plane crash in the country — and Pakistan’s worst — occurred in July 2010 when an Airbus A321 aircraft operated by domestic carrier Airblue crashed into the hills overlooking Islamabad, killing all 152 people aboard. A government investigation blamed the pilot for veering off course amid stormy weather.

Bhoja Air started domestic operations in Pakistan in 1993 and eventually expanded to international flights to the United Arab Emirates in 1998. The company suspended operations in 2001 due to financial difficulties but resumed them in 2012.

Without help, hundreds of thousands may lose Internet in July

LOLITA C. BALDOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | For computer users, a few mouse clicks could mean the difference between staying online and losing Internet connections this summer.

Unknown to most of them, their problem began when international hackers ran an online advertising scam to take control of infected computers around the world. In a highly unusual response, the FBI set up a safety net months ago using government computers to prevent Internet disruptions for those infected users. But that system is to be shut down.

The FBI is encouraging users to visit a website run by its security partner, <http://www.dwg.org>, that will inform them whether they’re infected and explain how to fix the problem. After July 9, infected users won’t be able to connect to the Internet.

Most victims don’t even know their computers have been infected, although the malicious software probably has slowed their web surfing and disabled their antivirus software, making their machines more vulnerable to other problems.

Last November, the FBI and other authorities were preparing to take down a hacker ring that had been running an Internet ad scam on a massive network of infected computers.

“We started to realize that we might have a little bit of a problem on our hands because ... if we just pulled the plug on their criminal infrastructure and threw everybody in jail, the victims of this were going to be without Internet service,” said Tom Grasso, an FBI supervisory special agent. “The average user would open up Internet Explorer and get ‘page not found’ and think the Internet is broken.”

On the night of the arrests, the agency brought in Paul Vixie, chairman and founder of Internet Systems Consortium, to install two Internet servers to take the place of the truckload of impounded rogue servers that infected computers were using. Federal officials planned to keep their servers online until March, giving everyone opportunity to clean their computers. But it wasn’t enough time. A federal judge in New York extended the deadline until July.

Now, said Grasso, “the full court press is on to get people to address this problem.” And it’s up to computer users to check their PCs.

This is what happened: Hackers infected a network of probably more than 570,000 computers worldwide. They took advantage of vulnerabilities in the Microsoft Windows operating system to install malicious software on the victim computers. This turned off antivirus updates and changed the way the computers reconcile website addresses behind the scenes on the Internet’s domain name system.

The DNS system is a network of servers that translates a web address — such as www.ap.org — into the numerical addresses that computers use. Victim computers were reprogrammed to use rogue DNS servers owned by the attackers. This allowed the attackers to redirect computers to fraudulent versions of any website.

Marking Kentucky's historic sites

marla.toncray@lee.net

A friend of mine recently asked me about all the historic markers located around downtown Maysville.

Not being from the area, but living here for his job, he began to take notice of the markers as he took his nightly walk or jog around town.

My friend is like many of us; you see these historic markers on the side of our major highways, in our downtown districts and in front of homes and buildings, but how often do we take time to read them? Another interesting fact about the markers is they cover events from the earliest settlement days to modern day people or events.

One way to learn more is to visit the website for the Kentucky Historical Society, which is an agency of the Kentucky Tourism, Arts and Heritage Cabinet. The website provides information on the society's historical marker program, as well as a list of how many markers are in each county. The website also gives a brief description of each marker, its location and marker number.

In the Buffalo Trace region of Bracken, Fleming, Lewis, Mason and Robertson counties, there are 61 historic markers: Bracken — 10; Fleming — 12; Lewis — 8; Mason — 27; Robertson — 4. There are more than 2,000 markers across the state, with a purpose to "increase the awareness of what we owe to those who came before us." *

Here are some samplings of our area's Kentucky Historical Society markers.

In Bracken County, marker 996 denotes the Casto-Metcalf Duel. The marker is located at the Bracken-Mason line on Kentucky 8.

"On the Ohio River shore

One of the largest and oldest pin- or swamp-oak trees in the world. In 1970, when the highway was relocated, it was about one hundred and fifty years old; its trunk circumference was 16.2 feet; the diameter at breast height was five feet, and the total height was 58 feet. This historic oak is preserved as one of nature's beautiful achievements.

near here one of the last duels fought in Kentucky under the "code duello" took place on May 8, 1862, between William T. Casto, former Maysville mayor, and Col. Leonidas Metcalfe, U.S. Army, son of former Gov. Thomas Metcalfe. Colts rifles were used at 60 yards. On the first fire Casto was mortally wounded. Metcalfe was not hit. See over.

(Reverse) Cause of the Duel — The duel (see other side) climaxed a bitter Civil War episode. In Oct., 1861, Metcalfe was ordered to arrest 7 men, including Casto, for aiding the Confederates. They were sent north to Union prisons; all were later released, Casto in Feb., 1862. His belief that Col. Metcalfe was responsible for his arrest led Casto to challenge him to duel which ended his own life."

In Fleming County, marker 1736, situated on the Fleming County Courthouse lawn, denotes the life of John F. Day (1913-1982) who became a journalist, writer and won two Emmy awards.

"A native of Fleming County, this prize-winning journalist began his career with the Lexington Leader; later worked with Washington Bureau of Louisville Courier-Journal. Director and Vice President of CBS News, 1955-61, where he won two Emmy awards. Wrote Bloody Ground, 1941, on Eastern Kentucky. John Day spent his last years in England publishing a weekly newspaper."

In Lewis County, marker 1393 marks the site of a magnificent Pin Oak tree located one mile east of Charters on Kentucky 10.

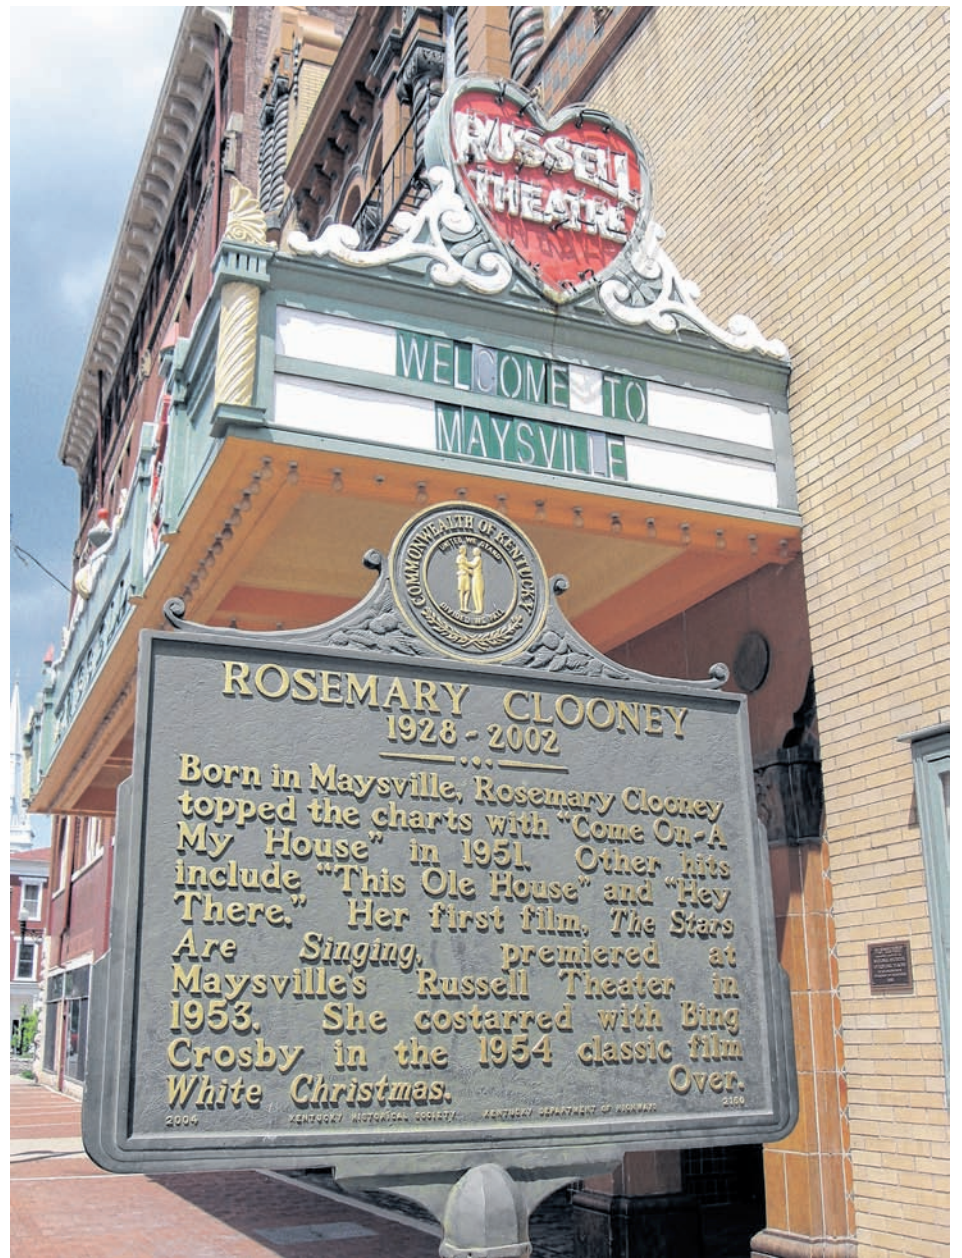

"One of the largest and oldest pin- or swamp-oak trees in the world. In 1970, when the highway was relocated, it was about one hundred and fifty years old; its trunk circumference was 16.2 feet; the diameter at breast height was five feet, and the total height was 58 feet. This historic oak is preserved as one of nature's beautiful achievements."

In Mason County, marker 144 denotes the Maysville Road, an important roadway during the early settlement days of the state. Marker is located on U.S. 68 near the Maysville Country Club.

"Built by 'Maysville and Washington Turnpike Company,' incorporated January 29, 1829. First four-mile stretch, Maysville to Washington, was earliest macadamized road in Kentucky and country west of the Alleghenies. Completed November 7, 1830. The road, Lexington to Maysville, was opened to travel in 1835 with thirteen toll-houses and six covered bridges."

In Robertson County, marker 816 gives the history of how the county was named for Congressman and professor George Robertson. The marker is located on the Robertson County Courthouse lawn.

"For George Robertson, 1790-1874. Born in Ky. In Congress, 1817-21, sponsored organization territory of Arkansas. Ky. Legislature eight years, six as Speaker; promoted the common-school system. Member Ky. Court

Show Mom your love with cheesy baked eggs in bed

ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Mother's Day is, of course, the day you serve the hardworking mother in your life a delicious breakfast in bed. And these baked eggs are a fantastic – and easy – way to do that.

If you aren't inclined to serve them in bed, they are just as at home on the brunch table. Accompany them with buttered toast for dipping and fruit salad.

In this image taken on March 26, baked eggs with toast for dipping and fruit salad are seen in Concord, N.H.

MOTHER'S DAY EGGS EN COCOTTE

Start to finish: 25 minutes
Servings: 4

4 tablespoons heavy cream, divided

4 tablespoons shredded prosciutto

4 eggs

4 tablespoons herbed chevre (soft goat cheese)

Ground black pepper

1/4 cup chopped fresh tomato

1 teaspoon chopped fresh thyme

Heat the oven to 375 F. Arrange four 4-ounce ramekins in a baking dish. Bring a small saucepan of water to a boil.

Pour 1/2 tablespoon of cream into the bottom of each ramekin. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon of the shredded prosciutto into each, then top with an egg. Top each egg with 1 tablespoon of the goat cheese and another

1/2 tablespoon of the cream. Sprinkle each lightly with pepper.

Pour enough boiling water into the baking dish around the ramekins to come halfway up the sides of the dishes, being careful not to get any in the ramekins.

Carefully move the baking dish to the oven and bake for 15 minutes, or until the whites are just set. Remove the ramekins from the baking dish and top each with 1 tablespoon of tomato and a sprinkle of thyme. Serve immediately.

Seacrest is heir apparent to Clark's pop influence

POP-CULTURE PRESENCE IN TV AND MUSIC

SANDY COHEN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES | As a kid, Ryan Seacrest idolized Dick Clark. As an adult, he modeled his career after the entertainment giant and helped him carry on with his annual New Year's Eve celebration after a stroke took its toll.

He called the 82-year-old mogul who died Wednesday "one of the greatest influences in my life."

Now Seacrest — uncannily in the Dick Clark mold — is left to carry on the youthful vitality and innovative spirit that Clark used so effectively to meld music and media.

And the 37-year-old is well on his way. Following Clark's playbook, Seacrest started as a radio host before expanding to TV and eventually producing. He's the voice of his nationally syndicated morning radio show and the international program "American Top 40." He's the face of "American Idol" and E! News. He's the producer behind "Keeping Up With the Kardashians" and its associated spinoffs, along with many other shows, including "Food Revolution" and "Shahs of Sunset." He's on the red carpet at the Grammys and Golden Globes. He'll be an Olympic correspondent for NBC and has hinted that he could take on a role at the "Today" show.

"Sometimes when I go home and turn on the hot water faucet, I think he's going to come out. He's everywhere," said longtime Hollywood publicist Michael Levine. "In the short term it can provide some annoyance, but in long term just adds to his iconic stature."

Clark parlayed his early radio dreams into a nearly four-decade run of "American Bandstand." He invested in the artists he promoted there and went on to produce hit shows like "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes" and the American Music Awards.

Seacrest enjoys a similar omnipresence, said veteran Hollywood publicist David Brokaw.

"He's becoming a 21st century Dick Clark," Brokaw said. "'American Idol' is a show for everyone," and that provides Seacrest a similar platform to what Clark had with "American Bandstand."

Seacrest paid tribute to his mentor on "American Idol" on Wednesday, saying, "Without Dick, a show like this would not exist."

"He will be missed greatly," Seacrest said.

"Our thoughts and prayers go out to his family. I know he's in a better place, saying, 'Let's get on with the show! You got it, boss!'"

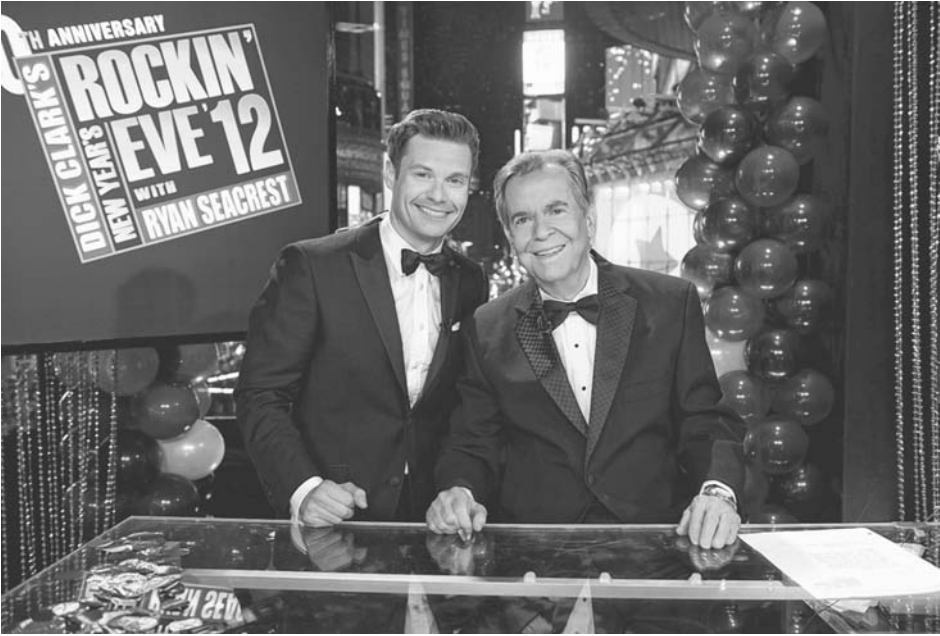

Among Seacrest's other entertainment ventures: A $300 million partnership with broadcasting giant Clear Channel to acquire and develop new media companies.

"We aim to build Ryan Seacrest Media into a leading multimedia company with diversified assets and interests," he said when the partnership was announced earlier this year. "The entertainment industry is thriving with innovation more than ever before."

It's also far more fragmented than ever before. Clark came up in the era before countless cable channels and the World Wide Web. Now the entertainment audience is everywhere.

"Obviously there's not the same sense of shared community today," Levine said. "But a person like Ryan can create a ubiquity and a presence on many, many platforms that would mirror what Dick Clark did."

"This presupposes that he won't have any scandals and will remain hungry," he Clark, the ever-youthful television host and tireless entrepreneur who helped bring rock 'n' roll into the mainstream on "American Bandstand," and later produced and hosted a vast range of programming from game shows to the New Year's Eve countdown from Times Square, died of a heart attack on Wednesday. He was 82.

added.

Seacrest shares other attributes with Clark that contribute to his success, Brokaw said. He's likable, he's got a "cherubic boyish charm and enthusiasm" that makes him feel like a friend and he has a hand in various entertainment entities.

"Anybody that's in this business that has any kind of high-end talent or emerging talent, you somehow crossed paths with Dick Clark, and Ryan Seacrest is the same way," Brokaw said.

And, like Clark, Seacrest is a star maker.

"Who would the Kardashians be without Ryan Seacrest?" Brokaw asked. "He's creating careers on the basis of what he does."

Clark's clean-cut and ever-youthful image appealed to people of all ages and helped make rock 'n' roll palatable to a generation of parents, just as Seacrest now does with today's stars.

Clark "was smart, charming, funny and always a true gentleman," Seacrest said Wednesday. "I learned a great deal from him, and I'll always be indebted to him for his faith and support of me. He was a remarkable host and businessman and left a rich legacy to television audiences around the world."

Now Seacrest hopes to do the same.

Review: 'Chimpanzee' aimed strictly at little kids

RESORTS TO GOOD CHIMP/ BAD CHIMP DRAMATICS

TODD MCCARTHY
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES | Some privileged nature footage from the African rain forest is dishonored by deeply silly narration in "Chimpanzee," which follows a particular group of chimps in the Ivory Coast's isolated Tai Forest.

This fourth documentary from the Disney nature label shares with last year's "African Cats" the fault of talking down and sugar-coating to coddle the tyke audience, a shame given the rarity of the intimate portrait provided of chimp life in rarely visited remote regions.

MARTYN COLBECK, ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this film image released by Disney, chimpanzees Isha and Oscar, foreground, are shown during the filming of the documentary "Chimpanzee."

With the sophistication and scientific information provided on TV nature docs steadily increasing, this sort of throwback aimed squarely at little kids feels very old school. The division's first release, in 2007, "Earth," pulled in an impressive $108 million worldwide and its follow-up, "Oceans," earned $82 million. "African Cats" dropped to $21 million, a figure perhaps more in the range of what this one will do.

Everyone loves chimps for the simple reason that to regard them is, but for a slight biological rearrangement, to look at ourselves. The close-together forward-looking eyes, warm child rearing, manipulation of tools, omnivore habits, communal spirit and general intelligence are undeniably relatable, even if humans generally see the animals only in the relative isolation of captivity.

Catching them on home turf in Africa is not easy, as they generally live in dense jungle, are not keen to be surrounded by a camera crew and can easily scamper off faster than they can be followed through the bush.

So high marks to Alastair Fothergill and Mark Linfield, who also directed "Earth" together (Fothergill also codirected "African Cats") for finding a way to comprehensively cover a particular group of chimps in the Tai Forest for a period of time long enough for young chimp Oscar to grow and learn a few survival tricks. Points, too, for the exceptionally observant and graceful camerawork of Martyn Colbeck and Bill Wallauer (Warwick Sloss did additional shooting), which brings the viewer in close and looks beautiful in the bargain.

The storyline the filmmakers stitched together from incidents that took place during the shoot follows the survival and education of Oscar, definitely a cute little bugger, as he learns to fit in with an extended family of about 36 chimps led by grand old man Freddy. Oscar's mother Isha, who is meant to nurse him until he's about five, instructs her son in the finer points of selecting berries and nuts, the latter being highly coveted.

Lawsuit claims 'Bachelor' show discriminates

SHEILA BURKE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. | Two black men are taking "The Bachelor" and "The Bachelorette" to court with a lawsuit that claims the reality shows are blocking contestants of color from starring roles.

Nathaniel Claybrooks and Christopher Johnson filed a federal lawsuit in Nashville Wednesday against the popular TV shows claiming they are engaged in a pattern of racial discrimination that intentionally excludes people of color. The Nashville men said at a casting call in August that they were given scant consideration compared to white men seeking a leading role for "The Bachelor."

Claybrooks said white applicants were given far more time and consideration during the interview process.

"I only wanted a fair shot at the part," said the soft-spoken Claybrooks, a 39-year-old college graduate and electric company meter reader who owns several small businesses. "Looking back at how I was treated at the casting call last year, it was clear that that wasn't possible. I never even had a chance."

Their attorneys said it is the first racial discrimination lawsuit filed against a reality show. It does not ask for a specific dollar amount of damages, but it does propose to make major changes in how people are seen on TV.

The two men say that after 10 years and a combined total of 23 seasons of "The Bachelor" and "The Bachelorette," neither show has featured a single person of color in a central role. The reality show features about 25 prospective brides competing for the heart of a single guy. The gender roles reverse in its sister show, "The Bachelorette."

Both shows have come under fire in recent years for not having enough diversity.

The lawsuit names Michael Fleiss, the creator of the shows, as well as ABC, Warner Horizon Television, Next Entertainment and NZK Productions. Calls and emails to Fleiss' publicist and an email to an ABC publicist were not immediately returned.

Warner Horizon Television released a statement late Wednesday evening saying the complaint is baseless and without merit.

"We have had various participants of color throughout the series' history, and the producers have been consistently — and publicly — vocal about seeking diverse candidates for both programs. As always, we continue to seek out participants of color," the statement reads.

THE MARIETTA TIMES, ON OHIO BECOMING THE 10TH STATE TO LEGALIZE SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

Ohio could become the 10th state to legalize same-sex marriage, if a push to get a measure on the November 2013 ballot is successful.

For that to happen, the Ohio Freedom to Marry Coalition must gather enough signatures and then, of course, voters would have to support the change in Ohio law from allowing marriage between a man and a woman to simply allowing marriage between two consenting adults. We're proud that Ohioans are taking this on and hope it is successful.

Not allowing gay couples to marry is a violation of civil rights, period. Religion shouldn't play a part in this argument and neither should politics or personal views on what or may not be "moral."

American citizens are all entitled to the same rights and it's discouraging and infuriating that in 2012, that's still not the case. ...

(A)long with the rights that go hand-in-hand with marriage, same-sex couples deserve to be able to be recognized as family and to experience the bonds and security that often accompany the institution of marriage. Allowing loving couples to unite and to create families together is only a plus for communities and society as a whole. ...

THE (TOLEDO) BLADE, ON AN OHIO VERSION OF THE FEDERAL EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT

Ohio's unemployment rate has fallen in recent months, but too many working families still struggle to make ends meet. A liberal think tank that advocates for low-income households has an intriguing idea that could help.

Last year, Policy Matters Ohio points out, the 21 percent cut in state income taxes phased in over the past several years benefited the top 1 percent of earners more than the bottom 99 percent. ...

Policy Matters says an Ohio version of the federal earned income tax credit could restore fairness to the state's tax structure and help its neediest families. ...

A state earned income tax credit of 10 percent of the federal credit would cost Ohio $210 million a year, Policy Matters says, and put an average of $221 in the pockets of nearly 1 million low-income working families. The spending the credit would stimulate would have a positive effect on local economies. ...

A state earned income tax credit would reward poor families for working and give them a boost out of poverty. Investing in Ohioans would be good policy.

HOW WE SEE IT

Open meetings are an obligation not an annoyance

Let's be clear: The Buffalo Trace Area Development District is a public agency and the board members and staff are fully accountable to open meetings and open records. That is the case, not because we say so or because the attorney general says so. It is not the case because BTADD leaders "concede" to abide by those regulations in spite of their reservations.

The Buffalo Trace Area Development District board of directors has some work to do and indications are BTADD officers understand the importance of the issues they face and are willing to make the necessary changes.

Our intention is to see that they do.

The ADD district serves the 5-county area and is a vital link in nurturing regional understanding and cooperation. Mayors, judge-executives and citizen members gather regularly to discuss opportunities and issues that affect all of us who live in this part of the state. The ADD district controls and distributes hundreds of thousands of dollars in federal and state appropriations and grants that provide services and direct support for our citizens from pre-natal care to senior citizen programs.

The 40-year-old organization has a reputation of strong leadership, careful money management and expertise in a range of issues. But there are challenges facing the ADD, and questions have been raised about its transparency and its processes.

Responding to a complaint by Lewis County Judge Executive Thomas Massie, a relative-newcomer to the board and a candidate in the GOP primary for the U.S. House of Representatives from the 4th Congressional District, the Kentucky Attorney General's office ruled the ADD district was in violation of Kentucky's Open Meetings Law.

Massie argued that the board held secret ballot elections, allowed proxy voting by individuals not in attendance at meetings and may have colluded prior to a February meeting to garner support for a nominee in a board appointment. The AG's office received responses from BTADD Board Chairman Bill Boggs and from John Estill who serves as a citizen member of the board and is also Mason County Attorney.

The attorney general, whose opinions carry the force of law in Open Meetings and Open Records cases, stated five times in a six-page opinion that he found the actions of the BTADD board to be in violation of Kentucky law.

Boggs told members of his executive committee and the full 25-member board that voting processes used in the election had been in place for "at least 30 years," and neither he nor BTADD staff was aware that secret ballots were illegal. Boggs and ADD executive director Amy Kennedy denied any attempt to garner support for either candidate in the appointment of a citizen member from Lewis County, contending that ADD staff merely responded to questions or requests from board members about the election.

In this case, ignorance of the law may not be an excuse, but it is at least a plausible explanation. BTADD allowed its board members to vote by checking off a paper ballot without signing the ballot and then allowed a three or four member team to count those ballots and announce the results.

The fact that such elections had been held since the creation of the organization suggests the problem may lie in the bylaws, not in the actions or intentions of the board or the staff.

Cleaning up the bylaws on that and the other issues raised by Massie is what Boggs says he and the executive committee are committed to do. Boggs said — and his board concurred — that the BTADD bylaws will be reviewed by the Department for Local Government in Frankfort and any processes that violate Open Meetings/Open Records or other state statutes will be brought to the board for amendment.

While we're encouraged by that statement, we were less than impressed with the board's tepid response to the news that it was in violation of open meetings and records law.

There was a general sense stated by Estill and reflected in several votes that the attorney general's opinion was debatable and that adherence to Open Meetings/Open Records is an annoyance, not an obligation.

Estill and Boggs both said they "may not" agree with "parts of" the attorney general's ruling, but would not appeal the ruling to the circuit court and would abide by its directions.

Estill raised the issue of defining BTADD as a "public agency" for open meetings purposes, suggesting those regulations may not apply to the BTADD.

Let's be clear: The Buffalo Trace Area Development District is a public agency and the board members and staff are fully accountable to open meetings and open records. That is the case, not because we say so or because the attorney general says so. It is not the case because BTADD leaders "concede" to abide by those regulations in spite of their reservations.

The BTADD board of directors is a public agency because it is made up of elected officials and their appointees, and they do the public's business and handle the taxpayer's money.

Anything less than a full endorsement of Open Meetings and Open Records without reservations or wiggle words is a slap in the face of voters who depend on these mayors and judge executives to do their jobs in the full light of day.

Unfortunately, personalities and pay-backs seem to have clouded the ability of some board members to see this issue clearly. It is understandable that — when challenged — the human response is to deny, defend and react aggressively.

Such a response has no place at the BTADD board table.

BTADD was in violation of the law. The board members utilized practices that had been in place for four decades and had no reason to believe they were doing anything illegal.

The board has suspended the use of secret ballots and proxies and has asked for 60 days to review and recommend necessary changes.

We endorse those actions, and we encourage the full BTADD board to embrace Kentucky laws regarding open meetings and open records or appeal the Attorney General's opinion and let's see what the courts — and the voters — have to say.

HOW THEY SEE IT

But anger only feels good; it doesn't get anything done.

THE COURIER-JOURNAL, LOUISVILLE, KY., ON THE AMERICAN LEGISLATIVE EXCHANGE COUNCIL:

At least the movie "Groundhog Day" — in which the protagonist was forced to relive the same day over and over — was clever and funny.

The Kentucky legislative version — in which the state's lawmakers are unable to complete their important business in 60 days and must reconvene in a special session at a cost of about $63,000 a day — is simply disgusting. And yet, here we go again.

The Senate's failure to pass a Transportation Cabinet budget, which is necessary to fund projects to be done under the state's road plan for 2012-14, is as inexplicable as it is irresponsible. Gov. Steve Beshear, who was confronted with unacceptable Senate Republican demands to sign a road plan passed at the last minute that he hadn't even had time to read before they would vote on the transportation budget, understandably lashed out at Senate President David Williams' willingness "to allow rank partisanship and obstructionism to take higher precedence than what is good for the people of this state."

But anger only feels good; it doesn't get anything done. What Kentuckians need is for the Senate to pass a spending plan that finances critically important projects — most importantly the Ohio River Bridges Project, which after years of delay is finally poised to move into the construction phase.

It is time, well past time really, for adults to take charge in the Senate.

ADVICE

Woman ready to say so long after an unwelcome kiss

DEAR ABBY: A friend's husband gave me a ride to the airport, and when I went to hug him goodbye as I have always done when we parted, he grabbed me by the arms and kissed me on the lips several times. I wasn't expecting it, and I certainly hadn't invited it. I made light of it, but it made me very uncomfortable and I don't want to see him again.

My problem is I don't know how to end my friendship with his wife. I would never tell her, and I do not wish to have this standing between us, so I'd rather just end the friendship. How should I handle this? She occasionally contacts me for lunch dates. — DISMAYED IN MANHATTAN

DEAR DISMAYED: You're lucky the wife contacts you for lunch dates only occasionally. It means she's a casual friend, which will make disengaging easier. When she calls, all you need to do is tell her you have other plans. You do not have to mention that foremost among them is avoiding any future contact with either of them because of her husband. DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing "Larry" for six months, and from day one we both agreed that we do not want to be in a relationship. I'm 29 and he's

34. But over time we have developed feelings for each other. Larry is recently divorced after 10 years of marriage. He tells me he doesn't want to lose me, but it's hard for him to commit for fear of being hurt.

Larry talks to other women and goes out, while I have basically committed myself to him. He gets upset if I talk to another man. He says I'm his best friend and he's afraid a relationship would change that.

I don't know what to do anymore. Neither one of us would be OK if the other started dating, but I'm sick of waiting for him to make up his mind. Should I move on? — IN LIMBO IN COLUMBUS, IND.

DEAR IN LIMBO: Yes, you should. But not before telling Larry exactly why, because the arrangement you have right now is unfair to you. If you don't, you and Larry could wind up being "best friends" forever and nothing more.

DEAR ABBY: When my wife and I renewed our wedding vows after 25 years of marriage, I gave her a beautiful diamond band to thank her for our years together. I lost her 20 years later and put the ring aside, not knowing what to do with it.

My son had been living with a lovely girl for a couple of years. They appeared to be a perfect match, so I gave him the ring and suggested he give it to her and propose. I looked forward to their happiness and perhaps some grandchildren.

My son presented it to her, she accepted and they were married. Sadly, after three years she divorced him and they have gone their separate ways. Should I contact her and ask for the return of the ring? Abby, it's not the money ($3,500). I wanted the ring to stay in the family, and she has opted out of our family. Please advise. — NOT SURE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR NOT SURE: By all means contact your former daughter-in-law and ask if she's willing to part with the ring. She may agree to give it to you or sell it to you if she still has it. However, if there has been animosity since the divorce, she may not feel inclined to be gracious — so be prepared.

Faris-Howard vows exchanged Jan. 14

Deandra Brooke Faris and Chad Lee Howard exchanged marriage vows on Jan. 14, 2012. The ceremony took place at May's Lick Lighthouse Church, with Danny Howard, father of the groom, and Ron Spencer officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Randy and Barbara Faris of Flemingsburg. The groom's parents are Danny and Connie Howard of May's Lick. The bride's grandparents are Dorothy Faris and the late Garr Faris and the late Earl and Hannah Dailey. The groom's grandparents are Betty Howard and the late Charles Howard and Ronny Rudy and the late Erma Rudy.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lace fitted-and-flared gown, mermaid style, with delicately crafted floral detail adorning the bodice and skirt and a beaded empire waist with a touch of sparkle and beading on the chapel train. A vintage headpiece with tulle and fabric flowers double roses fabric embellished headpiece with tulle to the side with crystal sprays. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of flowers with orchids and roses accented with lovely ribbons. The bride's jewelry was a three-strand pearl necklace and pearl earrings that were part of grandmother Rudy's collection.

Lighting of the candles was performed by the mothers then together with bride and groom. Christina and Jerry Bothman performed a song "Take This Road," Ronnell Benjamin sang "I Do," followed by Wayne and Kim Grannis with their rendition of "Ever Faithful to You." The groom surprised the bride by singing the song "God Gave Me You."

Serving as maid of honor was Danielle Suit and the bridesmaids were Andrea Slone, Shaylah Cropper, Kara Gayhart, Morgan Gillum and Kyla Cropper. The attendants wore guava tea-length satin dresses, half shoulder with a bow on the shoulder and they carried a round bridal bouquet ball arrangement of orchids and roses with nested ribbon accents.

Serving as the best man was the brother of the groom, Chucky Howard. The groomsmen were Trent Morgan, Chad Land, Ronnell Benjamin, Chris Sexton and Jeremy Huddleston.

The flower girl was Sklyer Morgan and the junior bridesmaids were Autumn Morgan and Kaylee Land. All of them wore white dresses with a guava satin band and bow in the back. They were escorted by Cole Morgan. Cadin Erwin was the ring bearer. The ushers were Jonathan and Joseph Caldwell and serving at the guest book and distributing programs were Alyson Shrout and Lisha Syck.

The reception was held at the May's Lick

Chad and Deandra Howard

Lighthouse gym and was beautifully decorated by wedding coordinator Beverly Cooper. Each table was decorated with white pedestals with guava, black and white flower rings and a candle at top. Pedestals were also decorated throughout the reception hall and lighted trees provided beautiful accents at each station. A three-tier square buttercream cake was trimmed with floral accents and initials and there was also a flowing fountain at the bottom. The groom's cake was decorated with a guitar on top.

Deandra graduated from Morehead State University in December 2012 and is employed at the Farm Bureau in Flemingsburg. Chad is employed with the Mason County School System. After a honeymoon trip to Florida and a cruise to Mexico, the couple is now residing in May's Lick.

Mason County library earns Certificate of Essential Level of Service

Mason County Public Library has been awarded an Essential Certificate by the Kentucky Public Library Association Standards Committee for participation in the 2011 round of the 2011-2012 Kentucky Public Library Standards. Only three libraries achieved that level this year. The benchmark to achieve each level is 70 percent for Essential, 75 percent for Enhanced, and 80 percent for Exemplary. To earn the certificate, libraries have to establish that the collection, space, technological tools and staff meet specified standards based on the population of the service area. During periods of economic downturn, the library has become a center of activity for members of the community who need access to information, entertainment, enlightenment and communication tools. Statistics show that Kentucky libraries overall have had a record number of visits and check-outs in 2011. Reports from Kentucky's 118 public library systems show that there were not only a record number of visits, but a record number of books and other items that were checked out. The annual report for 2011 indicates that more than 20 million patrons visited libraries around the state and checked out more than 30 million books and other items. Mason County Public Library has seen a steady increase in circulation of all kinds of materials, especially including eBooks and digital audio books which are downloadable from a consortium of Kentucky libraries. According to director

Valerie Zempter, the staff and board of trustees is gratified to be able to support the needs of the community in their pursuit of information in whichever form it takes.

In 1649, the Maryland Toleration Act, which provided for freedom of worship for all Christians, was passed by the Maryland assembly. In 1789, John Adams was sworn in as the first vice president of the United States. In 1836, an army of Texans led by Sam Houston defeated the Mexicans at San Jacinto, assuring Texas independence. In 1910, author Samuel Langhorne Clemens, better known as Mark Twain, died in Redding, Conn., at age 74. In 1918, Baron Manfred von Richthofen, the German ace known as the "Red Baron," was killed in action during World War I. In 1930, a fire broke out inside the overcrowded Ohio Penitentiary in Columbus, killing 332 inmates. In 1955, the Jerome Lawrence-Robert Lee play "Inherit the Wind," inspired by the Scopes trial of 1925, opened at the National Theatre in New York. In 1960, Brazil inaugurated its new capital, Brasilia, transferring the seat of national government from Rio de Janeiro. In 1972, Apollo 16 astronauts John W. Young and Charles M. Duke Jr. explored the surface of the moon. In 1986, a rediscovered vault in Chicago's Lexington Hotel that was linked to Al Capone was opened during a live TV special hosted by Geraldo Rivera; aside from a few bottles and a sign, the vault turned out to be empty. In 1992, Robert Alton Harris became the first person executed by the state of California in 25 years as he was put to death in the gas chamber for the 1978 murder of two teenage boys, John Mayeski and Michael Baker.

TEN YEARS AGO In a huge upset in French politics, extreme-right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen qualified to face incumbent Jacques Chirac in the runoff for French president. (Chirac ended up winning.)

FIVE YEARS AGO The Fallujah, Iraq, city council chairman (Sami Abdul-Amir al-Jumaili), a critic of al-Qaida who had taken the job after his three predecessors were assassinated, was himself killed by attackers in a passing car. American billionaire Charles Simonyi returned to Earth from a dream voyage to the international space station, riding a Russian capsule to a soft landing in Kazakhstan. Professional sailor Reid Stowe and his girlfriend, Soanya Ahmad, set off from North Hoboken, N.J., on a 1,000-day, nonstop globe-girdling cruise. (Ahmad abandoned the cruise in Australia in February 2008, saying she was plagued by seasickness and suspecting she was pregnant; Stowe completed the journey as he arrived in New York on June 17, 2010 and met his toddler son, Darshen, for the first time.)

ONE YEAR AGO President Barack Obama announced the Justice Department was assembling a team to "root out any cases of fraud or manipulation" in oil markets that might be contributing to $4 a gallon-plus gasoline prices. Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., announced he would step down amid a developing ethics probe while insisting he'd done nothing wrong. Japan sealed off a wide area around the radiation-spewing Fukushima power plant to prevent residents from sneaking back to homes they'd quickly evacuated. Jess Jackson, 81, founder of the Kendall-Jackson winery, died in Geyerville, Calif.

Wyoming cowboy church welcomes all comers

KELSEY DAYTON
Associated Press

LANDER, Wyo. | Scott Smail couldn't remember the last time he felt comfortable in a church. The horseshoer felt alienated at new-age churches, where he couldn't relate to the sermons, didn't know the songs and everyone dressed up. But on Sunday, April 1, Smail, in Carhart's and a camouflage hat, entered an old wooden building, actually part of the American Museum of the West, where 25 others had gathered for cowboy church. Smail felt at ease. Cowboy churches started as a way to remove barriers that kept people away from fellowship and worship, said Allen Upshaw, pastor of Lander's new church, which officially started March 18. Despite its name, the cowboy church brings in people from all walks of life, from bikers to artists. "It's the misfits and fringe of society that feel they don't fit into traditional church," Upshaw said. The church is part of the Southern Baptist organization, although it is nondenominational. The services are nothing like traditional Southern Baptist ones, which are much more rigid, Upshaw said. It's open to anyone, but targets the working cowboy and cowboys at heart. Last Sunday, Upshaw greeted church-goers in his black cowboy hat, boots and large belt buckle. Set in the historic-looking museum village, the church was built in 1909 and originated in nearby Hudson. The vaulted interior is simple with only stained glass for decorations and a wooden cross in the front. The wood floor, easy to clean, creaks when people move and reverberates when people tap their feet to the music. The church program directs people to the large John Deere bucket in the back if they wish to leave donations. There is no collection plate passed during service. Nor is there communion. "I don't save anybody," Upshaw said. "My job is to create an environment where people will stick around long enough that God can work on 'em."

Upshaw moved to Lander from Texas on Dec. 19 when the American Fellowship of Cowboy Churches sent him to start a church, the first affiliated with the organization in Wyoming. Upshaw has always been a church-going man, but often felt different churches forced the "Bible" to fit their message, he said. Friends told Upshaw and his wife about cowboy church when they lived in Texas. The Upshaws checked it out. The sincerity and simplicity of the church resonated with Upshaw. Despite its almost 3,000 people, he was greeted with a firm handshake and direct eye contact. The couple became regulars. Upshaw offered his background in business to help the church. Soon, though, he felt he wanted to serve in a different capacity. The growing church needed pastors. Upshaw volunteered. "That sure just came from a place deep inside me," Upshaw said. "I was sure. Absolutely 100 percent certain I was sure that way was my path." He didn't receive any formal pastoral training. It's been a learning process as he's moved forward. Last Sunday, midway through "Amazing Grace," Upshaw remembered to rouse the congregation to its feet to sing. As he's learning to lead a church, Upshaw is also learning about the cowboy way of life. Since relocating to Lander he's helped move cows and even rode a horse. Somewhere he has a picture of him at four years old climbing out of a bathtub with only a gun belt and cowboy hat on. He's always loved and admired the cowboy culture, he said. "It's in my blood." On April 1, Upshaw instructed the congregation to "bellow this one out" when they sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," accompanied by an electric keyboard. The music at the church is mostly old-time gospel and country-Western gospel that people might listen to on their own, he said. Hats come off only at the end of the service for a parting prayer, before the congregation sings "Happy Trails."

Bishops say Catholics must disobey unjust laws

Associated Press

WASHINGTON | The nation's Roman Catholic bishops called Thursday for a national campaign in defense of religious liberty, and urged resistance to laws that church officials consider unjust. In a new 12-page document that quotes the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., the bishops said priests, laypeople, public figures and others must be involved in the effort to change recent state and federal laws that church leaders believe violate religious freedom. "We address an urgent summons to our fellow Catholics and fellow Americans to be on guard, for religious liberty is under attack, both at home and abroad," the bishops wrote. The highest-profile clash has been over the mandate in the Obama administration's health care overhaul that most employers cover birth control costs for workers. The White House has offered a compromise for church-affiliated groups such as hospitals and universities, but bishops said the changes haven't gone far enough. Critics within and outside the church have accused the bishops of pressing the issue to remove President Barack Obama from office. But the bishops wrote, "this ought not to be a partisan issue." "The Constitution is not for Democrats or Republicans or independents. It is for all of us, and a great nonpartisan effort should be led by our elected representatives to ensure that it remains so," the bishops wrote. Several bishops have shut down their adoption and foster care programs where the government would require them to place children with same-sex couples. Church leaders have also been fighting tough immigration laws in Alabama and elsewhere that many religious groups say make it impossible for them to aid illegal immigrants. Catholic leaders have also protested a decision by federal officials not to renew a church contract for work with sex trafficking victims. Church officials would not provide the women birth control or abortion services. The bishops cited a line from King's 1963 "Letter from Birmingham Jail," in which he wrote that an unjust law is "out of harmony with the moral law." The bishops said that no "accommodation" can be sought for such laws. Instead, they must be resisted or repealed. "If we face today the prospect of unjust laws, then Catholics in America, in solidarity with our fellow citizens, must have the courage not to obey them," the bishops wrote. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops plans a national "Fortnight for Freedom" from June 21 to July 4 that will include prayer and study about religious liberty.

Fewer people registering for Susan G. Komen races

AFTER PLANNED PARENTHOOD CONTROVERSY, PARTICIPATION DROPS AT EVENTS

JAMIE STENGLE
Associated Press

DALLAS | For years, Katie Sanchez participated in her local Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure, raising money annually to honor her aunt, cousin and a male friend — all breast cancer survivors.

But when her local race rolls around this fall, she won't be there. She already donated her entry fee to Planned Parenthood.

"Pretty much everyone I walk with has decided to do something else," she said.

Sanchez and many other Komen supporters have abandoned the nation's largest breast-cancer charity since news emerged in late January that it had decided to stop making grants to Planned Parenthood for breast cancer-screening. Komen soon reversed that move following a three-day onslaught of criticism.

Organizers of individual Race for the Cure events — 5K runs and walks that account for most of the charity's fundraising — have seen participation decline by as much as 30 percent. Most also saw their fundraising numbers go down, although a couple of races brought in more money.

Race organizers acknowledge the effect of the Planned Parenthood debacle, which angered people on both sides of the abortion debate.

"I think there's no getting around the fact that the controversy did have an impact," said Leslie Aun, a spokeswoman for Susan G. Komen for the Cure. "We're not back where we were. We know that it's going to take a while."

Sanchez, an occupational therapist from Denver, said she was upset when she learned that Komen had pulled the funding. And she wasn't mollified when the charity reinstated it.

"I appreciate that they changed their minds, but that was still too little, too late in my opinion," said Sanchez, who has participated in five races over the past several years.

Sanchez, who describes herself as pro-choice but not pro-abortion, said the flip-flop caused her to lose respect for Komen's decision-making process.

"If it's really that important to you, then make a decision and stick with it," she said.

Only nine races have been held since the Planned Parenthood controversy, but an Associated Press survey of affiliates for the Dallas-based charity showed that a downward trend is already taking shape.

A month before a southern Arizona race, the number of people registered was about half as many as last year.

A spokeswoman for the affiliate in Tucson, Gillian Drummond, said the group held a news conference to "save our race" and focused on getting the word out that most of the money raised at the event goes to grants for local services, including breast screenings, cancer treatments and education programs.

JOYCE MARSHALL, ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this April 14, photo Teresa Blackington of Alvarado warms up before the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure in Fort Worth, Texas. Organizers of Race for the Cure events across the country have reported drops in participation following a controversy involving Planned Parenthood. In Fort Worth, participation declined by 23 percent.

The remaining 25 percent goes to national research.

"We just tried to connect with people that way and to show them that we do a lot of good locally," she said. "This is too valuable a race to lose."

By the time of the March 25 event, registrations had rebounded somewhat but were still about 30 percent lower than 2011 — roughly 7,200 registrants compared with 10,000. The $425,000 fundraising total was down by about 25 percent.

Many affiliates, including the one in Tucson, released statements saying they disagreed with the decision to pull the funding. And, like Tucson, many affiliates were not currently providing grants to Planned Parenthood.

Out of a total of about 2,000 grants nationwide, 22 currently go to Planned Parenthood, Aun said.

In Baton Rouge, the Komen affiliate's March 10 race saw registration fall by about 10 percent. But the group raised about $85,000 more than last year.

Solution for a disaster? House in a box, maybe

HOUSING SOLUTION FOR THE NEXT NATURAL DISASTER?

ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS | In one of the neighborhoods hit hardest by flooding in Hurricane Katrina's aftermath, developers have built a prototype house that's aimed at providing a quick housing solution for areas blown away by hurricanes and tornadoes or knocked down by earthquakes.

The dwelling in the Lakeview section of New Orleans is somewhat box-like, with a roof that slants inward and an arched structure in front that forms a covered front porch. But style isn't the purpose of the house that's meant to go up quickly after disasters and then serve as permanent housing that can withstand future calamities. It's designed to be environmentally friendly, survive outside damaged utility grids and can be shipped in pieces in a single container and assembled like an erector set.

The house is the first of its kind, but its designers believe that there could be demand for tens of thousands of them in areas around the world that need to quickly rebuild after disasters.

The arch serves as the mount for 22 solar panels and the inward-slanting roof catches rainwater, all with the goal of making the house independent of disaster-damaged electricity and water systems. Its walls are steel structural insulated panels — two sheaths of steel with a polystyrene core — best known for their use in walk-in refrigerators. The walls are erected on a system of heavy-duty tracks and supports, and tested to withstand winds of 156 miles per hour. Without wood, of course, they are quite unappealing to termites.

"This building can be put in a disaster area without infrastructure, but it is permanent and can be expanded," said Joseph Basilice, president of OceanSafe LLC, which produced the panels for the home.

After years of disasters, they believe the market is there.

"We're trying to make this a mass-production concept," said Richard Dupont, estimating manager for Woodward Design + Build, the house's construction manager. "You could sell them in onesies and twosies, but we want to sell them by the thousands."

Basilice said the durability of the steel panels already has been proven. "After Hurricane Andrew, the only thing left standing was the walk-in coolers," he said.

The house comprises about 1,100 square feet in a one-story living area featuring two bedrooms, two bathrooms, a great room and a kitchen. Its air conditioning system has individual room units with individual thermostats connected to a quiet outdoor compressor.

When it rains, water flows down the slanted roof into a 4-foot opening, collects in a cistern and then flows into a 6,000-gallon accumulation bladder. In New Orleans, rainwater can only be used for irrigation, although restrictions vary across the country, Basilice said.

Basilice said a filtration system could be used to make rainwater potable for almost any purpose.

"In many parts of the world, that's how people gather their water," said Judith Kinnard, an architecture professor at Tulane University, who, with fellow professor Tiffany Lin, designed the house. "Water is going to be an increasingly scarce resource worldwide."

The solar panels are designed to handle the house's routine power needs. It can also be fitted with a turbine to generate electricity in windy regions. The outside of the walls is composed of a cement fiberboard that resists moisture, Kinnard said.

About 14 weeks are required to put the house together, about the same time required for the building of a non-custom standard home, said C.J. Minor, co-owner of C&G Construction, which donated the land and served as general contractor.

Christophor Faust, managing partner a company called The Regen Group that specializes in green building techniques, said many ideas for the house started after Katrina when New Orleans-area builders were working with actor Brad Pitt's Make It Right rebuilding project. During that period, designers submitted entries for rebuilding houses in the city.

Faust's group lost in the finals and "after that, we decided to design a sustainable housing kit that could be shipped into a disaster area," he said.

Faust said the group also wanted to provide employment for construction craftsmen in disaster-hit areas, something that bringing in portable trailers doesn't do.

The house comes in a single container — transportable by truck, rail or ship — meets the toughest fire resistance codes and has walls that have been certified to withstand winds of up to 156 miles per hour, Faust said. Testing was performed in the "tornado cannon" at Texas Tech University.

There are only a few windows. Each is covered with a mesh that has been shown to repel a wooden plank hurled at 90 miles per hour, Basilice said.

RACHEL DENNY CLOW, ASSOCIATED PRESS

Marcia Lamb feeds one of her foster children outside a home she rents on San Rafael Drive in Portland, Texas, on Tuesday. A tornado damaged her home on Monday as a flash flood moved through the area. She said her family of seven and an overnight nurse took shelter in a bathroom as the tornado touched down. Many items in the home were destroyed and the home had windows blown out and roof damage.

In 1972, EPA battled pollution; now it’s politics

DINA CAPIELLO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | A polluted drainage ditch that once flowed with industrial waste from Lake Charles, La., petrochemical plants teems with overgrown, wild plants today.

A light-rail line zips past the spot where a now-defunct Portland, Ore., gasoline station advertised in 1972 that it had run out of gas.

A smoking Jersey City, N.J., dump piled with twisted, rusty metal has disappeared, along with the twin towers of the World Trade Center in lower Manhattan that were its backdrop.

Forty years after the Environmental Protection Agency sent an army of nearly 100 photographers across the country to capture images at the dawn of environmental regulation, The Associated Press went back for Earth Day this year to see how things have changed. It is something the agency never got to do because the Documerica program, as it was called, died in 1978, the victim of budget cuts.

AP photographers returned to more than a dozen of those locations in recent weeks, from Portland to Cleveland and Corpus Christi, Texas. Of the 20,000 photos in the archive, the AP selected those that focused on environmental issues, rather than the more general shots of everyday life in the 1970s.

Gone are the many obvious signs of pollution — clouds of smoke billowing from industrial chimneys, raw sewage flowing into rivers, garbage strewn over beaches and roadsides — that heightened environmental awareness in the 1970s, and led to the first Earth Day and the EPA’s creation in 1970. Such environmental consciousness caused Congress to pass almost unanimously some of the country’s bedrock environmental laws in the years that followed.

Today’s pollution problems aren’t as easy to see or to photograph. Some in industry and politics question whether environmental regulation has gone too far and whether the risks are worth addressing, given their costs.

Republican presidential contender Mitt Romney has called for the firing of EPA chief Lisa Jackson, while GOP rival Newt Gingrich has said the EPA should be replaced altogether. Jackson has faced tough questioning on Capitol Hill so often the in past two years that a top Republican quipped that she needs her own parking spot.

“To a certain extent, we are a victim of our own success,” said William Ruckelshaus, who headed the EPA when it came into existence under Republican President Richard Nixon and was in charge during the Documerica project. “Right now, EPA is under sharp criticism partially because it is not as obvious to people that pollution problems exist and that we need to deal with them.”

Environmental laws that passed Congress so easily in Ruckelshaus’ day are now at the center of a partisan dispute between Republicans and Democrats. Dozens of bills have been introduced to limit environmental protections that critics say will lead to job losses and economic harm, and there are those who question what the vast majority of scientists accept — that the burning of fossil fuels is causing global warming.

In the 1970s, the first environmental regulations were just starting to take effect, with widespread support. Now, according to some officials in the oil and gas and electric utility industries, which are responsible for the bulk of emissions and would bear the greatest costs, the EPA has gone overboard with rules.

For instance, Documerica photographers captured a wave of coal-fired power plants under construction. Republicans and the industry now say environmental regulations are partly to blame for shuttering some of the oldest and dirtiest coal plants.

Jim DiPeso of ConserveAmerica, a group that recently changed its name from Republicans for Environmental Protection, says the EPA is caught in the center of a perfect storm. “This time of greater cynicism about government, more economic anxiety and the fact that the problems are not immediately apparent, has created this political problem for EPA,” he said.

GERALD HERBERT, ASSOCIATED PRESS
This photo taken April 13, shows a one-time chemical drainage ditch now overgrown with vegetation photographed at the location of an historic photo taken in 1973 near the Pittsburgh Paint and Glass plant in Lake Charles, La. for the Environmental Protection Agency’s “Documerica” program, 1972-1977, to documents subjects of environmental concern.

In an interview, Jackson said she believes that people in the United States still want to protect the environment. “There’s a large gulf between the rhetoric inside the Beltway to do everything from cut back on EPA to get rid of the whole place, and what the American people would actually stand for,” she said. “It’s very easy to make rash statements without thinking about what that means to the health of everyday Americans.”

A 2010 Pew Research Center survey showed that 57 percent of those questioned held a favorable view of the EPA, compared with a 1997 poll that showed 69 percent with a positive view of the agency. A poll taken last year found that 71 percent of people surveyed supported EPA funding.

Elaborate prom invites get a new name: Prom-posals

IN FLASH MOBS, SCAVENGER HUNTS, FLYOVERS

BETH J. HARPAZ
Associated Press

NEW YORK | Never mind a text that meekly asks “will u go 2 prom w/ me?”

Today’s teenagers are taking a cue from elaborately staged wedding proposals, inviting each other to prom with flash mobs, scavenger hunts, homemade music videos and even airplane banners flying over the beach.

And while coming up with clever or romantic ways to ask someone to prom isn’t an entirely new concept, the effort and expense going into the big ask these days has given rise to a new term: Prom-posal.

“This year is the first time we’ve done prom invitations,” said Remy Colin, owner of Aerial Messages, a company that charges $600 for a plane to fly a banner with a message on it. “It’s expensive as hell for a high schooler who doesn’t have any money, but we’ve done two in the past three months,” one in Myrtle Beach, S.C., and one in Tampa, Fla.

Alex Chichkov, 17, arranged for a plane trailing “Come to prom with me, Kayla?” to fly over a student fundraiser his girlfriend Kayla Bennett was attending at King High School in Tampa in March.

“I’ve seen it for weddings and I wanted to do something huge or unique,” said Alex, a senior who paid for the flyover with money he earned working at a family business. “I didn’t want to do anything generic. In the history of the school, no one has done anything that big. It’s going to be my only prom, first time ever, last time ever, with someone who’s been my girlfriend for two and a half years, so it deserves to be that big.”

The plane flew over a student Relay for Life event, which raises money for the American Cancer Society, right before the talent show, while a sound system played a Michael Buble cover of the Frank Sinatra song, “Come Fly With Me.”

“Everyone was cheering and she had the biggest smile on her face,” Alex said. Naturally, Kayla said yes.

Rebecca Leet, 17, had an audience of over 250 people for a prom-posal from her boyfriend, Joe Nelson, 18. Rebecca and Joe both worked on a school performance of “Thoroughly Modern Millie” at Collierville High School in Collierville, Tenn. At the end of the show, their teacher, Keith Salter, told the audience to stay put for one more thing.

Joe came out on stage, got down on one knee and pulled out a box with a ring in it. “It’s not what you think!” Salter quickly assured the audience, as some gasped, thinking it was a teenage marriage proposal.

Then Joe popped the question — the prom question. “She got all teary and said yes,” Joe said. “It made my day just knowing I did something memorable and she really enjoyed it.”

Nancy Darling, an Oberlin College professor of psychology who studies adolescent development, said teenage relationships go through stages, one of which is taking the romance public. “It’s a public declaration of ‘I really want to go to the prom, and I like you!’” she said.

She added that despite stereotypes of teens “as sex-driven and aggressive,” data shows kids are now becoming “more conservative” socially, with less sexual intercourse than previous generations. “We’re back to being romantic,” she said.

Kiser proudest of Eastern's reputation of class

FORMER LADY WARRIORS COACH
TO BE INDUCTED INTO OHSBCA
HALL OF FAME TONIGHT

ZACK KLEMME
zack.klemme@lee.net

Richard Kiser said he hasn't given much thought to the legacy of his 33 years as Eastern Brown's girls' basketball coach.

But upon brief reflection, he said it isn't about the 601 games the Lady Warriors won under his direction, which is sixth on the all-time Ohio list. And it wasn't just about all Eastern accomplished from 1977 to 2010 — 20 Southern Hills League titles, 19 sectional crowns, 10 district titles and three regional championships, including the 2001 team that finished second in Ohio's Division III.

And certainly not about the voluminous coach of the year awards he's taken home — 11 SHL, eight district, two Associated Press, one OHSAA and two state coaches' association awards.

His legacy, Kiser said, is more about what the program's alumnae have gone on to do, and how they carried themselves when wearing Eastern's red and white uniforms.

"I'm really excited that so many of the kids not only had success on the court but have been very successful off the court," he said in a Wednesday night phone interview. "That's great when you see that happening to your players."

12 Reds hits equal 10,000th franchise victory

BAILEY LIMITS CUBS TO ONE EARNED RUN

Associated Press

CHICAGO | The Cincinnati Reds used a lot of little hits to achieve a very big milestone.

Cincinnati rapped out 12 hits — nine singles — and cruised to a 9-4 win over the Chicago Cubs on Friday for the 10,000th win in franchise history.

"When you look at 30 different teams and being one of six, it's a pretty cool thing," said outfielder Drew Stubbs. "To be a part of it is pretty special."

Harsh winds and chilly temperatures didn't slow Cincinnati's offense. Stubbs drove in three runs for the Reds, who joined the Cubs, Giants, Dodgers, Braves and Cardinals as the only teams to reach the 10,000 win plateau.

The Cubs dropped their sixth straight and fell to 3-11 on the year.

Winds were blowing in, gusting up to 27 mph, and the game-time temperature was 35 degrees with the wind chill.

Chris Volstad (0-2) labored through a four-run, 41-pitch first inning. He gave up run-scoring singles to Joey Votto and Chris Heisey, and an RBI groundout to Willie Harris as the Reds batted around for the first time this season.

"It breeds confidence the more hits you get," said Reds manager Dusty Baker. "So it was good for us to get those hits."

Starlin Castro and Marlon Byrd didn't help Volstad by committing errors in the inning, but only one of the runs was unearned.

WEST UNION 10, PEEBLES 0

Dragons escape early jam, capitalize on Indians miscues

ZACK KLEMME
zack.klemme@lee.net

WEST UNION, Ohio | Peebles coach Judd Johnson knew the turning point of the Indians' Friday loss at West Union when he saw it.

Peebles got its first three batters on in the top of the first inning, but senior Dragons pitcher Tyler McCoy, impervious to the pressure, fanned three straight Indians to get out of his early jam.

"It was like the air went out of a balloon in our dugout," Johnson said.

West Union then scored four two-out runs in the bottom of the first and coasted to a 10-0 five-inning Southern Hills League victory.

Freshman Kyle Taylor went 2-for-3 with a pair of doubles and three RBI to pace the Dragons (7-5, 3-3 SHL).

McCoy limited the Indians to five hits and a walk, punching out eight batters. Johnson called him "as good a pitcher as we've seen all year."

Cole Demint was 2-for-3 to lead Peebles (4-11, 1-8 SHL) at the dish.

Each team garnered five hits. Where the Indians went wrong was six errors, plus five walks and three hit batsmen issued by Peebles pitching.

"We gotta do whatever we can to score," Dragons coach

Sean Inman said. "We're not always gonna hit, so taking those walks, stealing bases when we can, and playing off the errors, that's what we have to do."

Peebles appeared to set up a slugfest by loading the bases right off the bus. Demint and Adam King singled and Brady Johnson worked a walk.

Bulls, Heat still jostling for playoff position

WITH SEASON SERIES TIED AT TWO WINS EACH

TIM REYNOLDS
Associated Press

MIAMI | To get where they want to ultimately go this season, the Chicago Bulls expect to see the Miami Heat again in the playoffs, and vice versa.

And with the final few days of this truncated NBA regular season now here, it's still unclear who would host Game 1 of such a series. Or Game 7, more importantly.

The Bulls lead the Heat by 1½ games, just one in the loss column, and if tiebreakers decide the top seed the edge swings to Miami because of a better record against likely East playoff teams. Still, even with the reigning MVP in Derrick Rose still ailing as he has been for much of the season, Chicago knows all it needs to do is simply go 3-0 down the stretch to wrap up the No. 1 seed.

Should Chicago slip — certainly a possibility with defending NBA champion Dallas looming Saturday and upstart Indiana ready to host the Bulls on Wednesday — then things get really interesting.

HOUNDS LET 8-0
LEAD SLIP IN 20-10
LOSS TO FAIRFIELD

Host Manchester held an 8-0 lead after two innings and was up 9-5 after three against Fairfield on Friday, but the Lions scored seven in the fourth and led the rest of the way in a 20-10 win.

Dalton West, Travis Combs and Tyler Brummett each racked up two RBI for the Greyhounds. Dylan Ricketts went 3-for-5, West was 2-for-4, Combs was 2-for-5, Brummett went 2-for-4, Zach Gilliam was 2-for-4 and Marshall Spencer was 2-for-2.

Fairfield's Joey Wilson, George Montgomery and C.J. Alexander all drove in three runs. Isaiah Liggins, Wyatt Crothers, Cody Bennett and Zach Cox all had two RBI.

The teams combined for 43 hits.

Lady Jays fall to hard-hitting Lady Rockets

CHUCK HAMILTON
chuck.hamilton@lee.net

RIPLEY, Ohio | The visiting Fayetteville Lady Rockets pounded out 16 hits, including six for extra bases, on their way to a 14-4 mercy-rule shortened five-inning game at Ripley on Friday.

The Lady Rockets scored at least one run in each of their at-bats and improved to 12-2 on the season and 8-2 in the Southern Hills League. The Lady Jays fell to 3-6 with the defeat.

Fayetteville coach Carmen Carson was pleased with the way her squad came out swinging.

"We were coming off a couple of games where we weren't hitting the ball well," she said. "We've been struggling at the plate and it was good to see a faster pitcher (Ripley junior Morgan Wright) today. We just needed to get the bat where the ball was pitched because she was helping to provide the power with her speed. She has improved 100 percent from when we saw her last year but getting 16 hits today makes up for some of our recent struggles."

The Lady Rockets scored a pair of runs in each of the first two innings, had a single run in the third, four in the fourth and five in the fifth.

Wright threw a ton of pitches, striking out 10 in her five-inning stint in the pitcher's circle and Ripley coach Aimee Carpenter said after the game her ace right-hander gave it her all, despite not being at it herself.

"Morgan did a very nice job of pitching, especially considering how sore she was today," Carpenter said. "She's a strong girl but she got tired out there today and we knew coming into the game that they had some hitters."

KISER

FROM C1

I probably have three or four that's doctors, two or three lawyers. Many of them have been very, very successful upon graduation."

Eastern is generally considered by its peers and competitors to carry itself well as a program.

"Over the years, I think no matter who the coach was at Eastern, especially the basketball aspect of it, we've always stressed to act like winners," Kiser said. "A lot of the other coaches have commented on the fact that our kids have played with class. ... For the most part we've lost with dignity, I guess you would say, and won with class. I've been pretty pleased with that."

The Lady Warriors' sterling accomplishments and reputation under Kiser have gotten him a ticket into the Ohio High School Basketball Coaches Association Hall of Fame, whose 2012 induction is tonight in Columbus.

One of many people and entities Kiser expressed gratitude to — including his parents and wife and family, community members, players' parents and even local media — was the Eastern school district, for putting resources and emphasis into girls' sports at a time in the late '70s when that wasn't necessarily the norm.

"I've really never thought about girls' basketball growing to what it has today, and back then (when I started), a lot of schools didn't support the girls programs much," Kiser said. "Fortunately for me, Eastern did. That was a real plus."

"...It took a few dollars to do some of these things (such as traveling to play competitive games), and Eastern was very, very good about supporting me and let me do those things."

Under Kiser, Eastern turned itself into a traditional power. Three of his Lady Warriors squads made trips to the state Final Four, and while Kiser noted those clubs were "exceptional," they weren't alone.

"Every team that I coached I thought was successful, beginning with the first year," he said of his 1977-78 team. "We went 8-7 the first year and I just had one senior, and all the rest of 'em were underclassmen, and we started out and lost our first two games I think by a total of 60 points, but those kids were able to understand what we were trying to accomplish and that we were gonna play as a team, and we turned that year around and had a winning record."

That doesn't mean those teams that went to three straight Final Fours from 2000-2002 don't stick out in Kiser's mind.

"That was just a terrific bunch of kids," he said. "The thing that I remember about them the most was, from the best player on that team to the last player on the bench, they all were just such hard workers and they all were just so dedicated."

Looking ahead to tonight's ceremony, Kiser said he's "not really good at public speaking" and is thus "a little nervous about that," but plans to get through that by thanking "a lot" of people associated with the program.

One he will be thinking of in particular is Joe Myers, a longtime supporter who died last year at 70.

"I don't know what my record would have been without Joe," Kiser said. "He was such an inspiration to the kids, I can't tell you how many games we got to the end and Joe'd be down there hollering and I think he was the one that actually got us over the hump to make the big basket or make the play that won us the game. A real blessing."

John Burrows, the Lady Warriors' current head coach who has been around Eastern in various coaching positions about as long as Kiser, assisted the legendary coach for 12 years and coached middle school and freshman boys before that. So he's had an up-close view of Kiser's teams.

"His legacy would be the fact that he put so much time and effort into it and the number of kids that he's coached throughout the years that have gone on to be successful, not only playing basketball but in other things," Burrows said. "He always seemed to be able to put kids in positions in games where they could be most successful ... he could put 'em in where they would achieve and be successful. ... He's just done a great job and worked really hard to get things where they are."

"Just hope I can keep 'em there," he added with a chuckle.

Eastern boys coach Rob Beucler has been similarly impressed with the work Kiser put into building the Eastern program.

"Richard, like many of the coaches in our district, has made the coaching profession a year-long job," Beucler said in a Friday email, noting the extra effort of organizing summer AAU ball and fall off-season workouts. "When the season was over you started all over again. He has given over 30 years and is very deserving of this award and I have enjoyed greatly the times we have spent sharing ideas and thoughts on how we could each make the boys and girls programs better. His legacy will be remembered and he will always be remembered as a pioneer of girls' basketball in southern Ohio."

Kiser joins Tom Davis of East Canton, Rick Van Matre of Greenfield McClain and Jack Van Reeth of West Holmes in this year's Hall class.

I've really never thought about girls' basketball growing to what it has today, and back then (when I started), a lot of schools didn't support the girls programs much."

Hendrick still seeks 200th win at Kansas Speedway

WINLESS SINCE LAST OCTOBER

DAVE SKRETTA
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Kan. | It's turned into the joke that nobody can really laugh about, the cloud hanging over one of the most successful teams in the history of NASCAR. Thirteen races have passed since Hendrick Motorsports reached Victory Lane, the longest drought the team has experienced since the 2002-03 seasons. And the result is that Hendrick is still stuck on 199 victories, the milestone maddeningly just out of reach. "You know, now it's turned. We've been so close to getting it the last month or so, it's kind of a deal now where we're joking, like, let's not even think about it," said five-time Sprint Cup champion Jimmie Johnson, who claimed the team's last victory in October at Kansas Speedway. The series is back this weekend for the first of two races this year. It should give the powerhouse team some positive vibes. Johnson also won from the pole at Kansas in 2008, and Jeff Gordon won the first two races at the track in 2001 and '02. Dale Earnhardt Jr. has five top-10 finishes on the 1½-mile oval and is currently third in points, while Kasey Kahne is coming off a Trucks series win at Rockingham. No owner has more wins at Kansas Speedway than Hendrick. "We know our teams are all capable of winning races. We've all been there," Johnson said Friday. "Whenever it happens, you'll see a very big sigh of relief from Rick and the team." It's not as though Hendrick Motorsports hasn't been competitive. To the contrary: It has been frustratingly close. Hendrick's stable has finished second four times since Johnson's victory during last season's Chase, including his second-place run last Saturday night at Texas. Johnson led a race-high 156 laps, but a couple of subtle tweaks on his final two pit stops turned out for the worst. Greg Biffle passed him for the lead with 30 laps left, and the two-time winner at Kansas held on for his first Sprint Cup victory since October 2010. "When you lead the most laps and finish second, those stink," Johnson said. "Last weekend I thought long and hard about the last two pit stops and the adjustments we made. We still had a fast race car, but those last two segments weren't the strongest." Johnson had another fast car a few weeks ago at Martinsville, and was leading late in the race. David Reutimann's car stalled and brought out a caution, and then a wreck collected Johnson and Gordon, preventing them from making a run at the green-white-checked finish. "We're real happy with the way our cars perform come race time," Johnson said. "Qualifying has been a bit of a struggle, though last weekend we had a top 10, which wasn't too bad." Johnson is confident that Hendrick Motorsports will finally get a win. This is a team, after all, that won five straight championships with Johnson, and had claimed five more before that between Gordon and Terry Labonte, who won the title in 1996. Johnson and Gordon combined for five wins last season, and Johnson won six alone in 2010. The last time the team went through such dol-drums, Johnson was running his first full Cup schedule. The team went 15 straight races without a victory that time, a stretch that began — in a cruel coincidence — after Gordon won the 2002 race at Kansas Speedway. Then again, the very notion that folks are talking about 13 races being a drought says a lot about Hendrick Motorsports, where success is measured at a different level than most places. "You take the 48 and the 24 and you look at their success — obviously that success is throughout the whole organization — but those two teams having that much success and winning that many championships proves what you have is working well," Gordon said. Gordon talked about the team reaching the 200-win milestone as if it's a given, something bound to happen eventually. He'd just rather it happen sooner than another six months. "We look at it a lot different," he said. "I feel like Jimmie had a chance to win the race last week, three of us had a chance the race before. The opportunities are there. We're running very good. We continue that we'll, get the win." If nothing else, Hendrick Motorsports will celebrate one accomplishment this weekend: The team will start its 3,000th race dating to Geoff Bodine's appearance in the 1984 Daytona 500. "If you can win such a majority, I think it says a lot about your ability to put people in the right places," Earnhardt said. "I'm sure there are other things that play a role in that over the years, but I guess it comes down to Rick's eye for talent."

Yanks spoil Fenway's 100th

Associated Press

BOSTON | Alex Rodriguez took over fifth place on the career homer list with his 631st blast, Eric Chavez added two homers and the New York Yankees spoiled the Boston Red Sox 100th anniversary celebration of Fenway Park with a 6-2 win Friday. Rodriguez' solo shot on the first pitch of the fifth inning put him past Ken Griffey Jr. and 29 homers behind Willie Mays' fourth-place total of 660. Nick Swisher and Russell Martin also connected for New York, and Derek Jeter moved into 18th place with his 3,111th career hit, passing Dave Winfield. The victory came exactly 100 years after the Red Sox beat the Yankees' forerunner, the New York Highlanders, 7-6 in 11 innings, and one day after Curtis Granderson hit three of New York's four homers in a 7-6 win over the Minnesota Twins. Clay Buchholz (1-1) allowed all five homers in losing for the first time in 12 starts. Josh Beckett also served up five homers in Boston's second game of the year, a 10-0 loss at Detroit.

CARDINALS 4, PIRATES 1
PITTSBURGH | Lance Lynn allowed only an inside-the-park homer to Alex Presley in seven innings, leading St. Louis to a victory over the Pirates.

Presley led off the bottom of the first with a drive off the top of the center field fence, the ball just eluding a leaping center fielder Skip Schumaker. It was just the Pirates' second inside-the-parker at PNC Park since it opened in 2001. Filling in nicely for injured ace Chris Carpenter, Lynn (3-0) gave up four hits. He walked one and struck out four. Lynn also scored the go-ahead run on Carlos Beltran's two-out single in the fifth inning off Charlie Morton (0-1).

NATIONALS 2, MARLINS 0
WASHINGTON | Ross Detwiler and three relievers combined on a four-hitter, Rick Ankiel homered and had three hits and the Nationals beat Miami. Detwiler (2-0) allowed three hits over six innings and struck out seven, equaling a career high. Craig Stammen threw a perfect seventh and Tyler Clippard struck out Hanley Ramirez with two on to end the eighth after walking Emilio Bonifacio on 14 pitches. Henry Rodriguez walked two in the ninth but still earned his fourth save as Washington improved to 11-4. Leading off the third, Ankiel hit a 2-0 pitch from Carlos Zambrano (0-1) far over the center-field wall for his first home run of the year.

REDS

FROM C1

Fielding woes were contagious as Heisey was unable to haul in Castro's fly ball in the third inning, which led to two unearned runs. The teams combined to make five errors. The Reds tacked on a pair of runs in the fourth on Stubbs' double into the right-field corner. He finished with three hits and two stolen bases. "I stayed on every pitch," said Stubbs. "Leading up to that I had been kind of pulling off of some sliders, especially, but I got a lot of them today and was able to drive one to right field."

Homer Bailey (1-2) pitched seven solid innings for his first victory of the year. He allowed four runs, but only one was earned. Bailey struck out two and walked none. He also drove in a run with a groundout in the sixth. "Especially with the wind, it's here it is, hit it as hard as you can," said Bailey. "It's probably not going to go anywhere." The Cubs sent several balls into the teeth of the wind, blowing in from left field, including Castro's third-inning fly ball and a ninth-inning blast off the bat of Geovany Soto. But none went beyond the warning track. "This park plays like polar opposites, as different as any park I've ever seen," said Stubbs. "When the wind's blowing out, it's hard to keep the ball in the yard. When the win's blowing in, you can give it all you got." "You try to stay more on top of the ball, hit more line drives because anything in the air is going to get held up." Volstad gave up six runs, five earned, on seven hits over five innings. He was lifted for pinch-hitter Blake DeWitt in the fifth. DeWitt doubled and came around to score on Darwin Barney's groundout to cut the Reds' lead to 6-3. "(The first inning) put me in a huge hole, put the team in a big hole," said Volstad. "That's not the momentum you want to put the team in right off the bat." The Reds added a run in the eighth inning on Stubbs' single to score Devin Mesoraco, and on a ninth-inning pinch-hit triple by Todd Frazier. Mesoraco finished 2 for 3 with two runs scored. Aroldis Chapman struck out a pair in a scoreless eighth, and Jose Arredondo pitched a flawless ninth to close the door. Bryan LaHair had two more hits for the Cubs. He's batting .375 on the year and has a base hit in every game he's started. Notes: The Cubs placed RHP Kerry Wood (right shoulder fatigue) on the 15-day disabled list and recalled LHP Scott Maine from Triple-A Iowa. Brandon Phillips was held out of the lineup due to the cold weather and lingering hamstring soreness. Ryan Dempster (strained right quad) is questionable for his start on Sunday. RHP Randy Wells will be recalled from Iowa if Dempster is unable to go. . Paul Maholm takes the mound for the Cubs on Saturday in the second game of the series against Mike Leake. Both are in search of their first win of the season.

DRAGONS

FROM C1

McCoy proceeded to strike out Tyler Fenner looking, then John Thomas Penn and Tyler Gray swinging to get out of it. "That was big for us because in the past games, we get bases loaded like that, we get nervous and walk some batters and usually they score a lot of runs off that," Inman said. "So those strikeouts were big." Gray, Peebles' junior starting hurler, got two outs to begin the West Union first, but the hosts grabbed four quick runs and were in control from then on. Taylor's double to left-center plated Wesley Fleshman, who singled, and Jesse Heltterbride, who had been hit in the helmet by Gray's offering. Taylor scored on an error, and Austin Kingsolver came home on a passed ball for that 4-0 edge. "The game was pretty much over right there," Johnson said. "Our guys just mentally were done after that." The Dragons tacked on four more in the second inning and two in the third to assume a double-digit lead. Bryce Kramer found himself caught in a rundown between second and third base after Fleshman bounced it back to the mound, but Kramer escaped on a throwing error and scored. Fleshman crossed the dish on a wild pitch, and Gray fanned Brandon Daniel for what should have been the third out of the inning, but his pitch in the dirt got away and Taylor scored from third. Kingsolver came home on another wild pitch. Taylor's third-inning groundout scored Kramer and Fleshman came home on another throwing error to set the final margin. Johnson noted it wasn't all bad for Peebles. He singled out Ryan Brown's mound work in relief, Jonathan Pryor's effort behind the plate, and Alex Seaman's outfield play. "There's some positive things, we just cannot put a whole game together," he said. "That's just it in a nutshell right now." West Union, young and thin at least in part due to the new school district pay-to-play policy also in effect at Peebles, is still working on getting it all figured out. "They're young and we're young, and we both have struggled a little bit this season," Inman said, "but we played pretty well today." The Dragons entertain Fayetteville on Tuesday, while the Indians host Western Latham this afternoon.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

ARE AGING EYES LINKED WITH INSOMNIA?

Interesting new research may help explain why so many older adults experience difficulty sleeping. While examining the eye lenses of nearly 1,000 volunteers, researchers found that the natural, age-related yellowing of the eye lens results in absorption of blue light, which has an effect on sleep. The more yellowing of the eye lens that occurs, the less blue light reaches the retina. As a result of diminished transmission of this portion of the visible-light spectrum, blue light exerts less of an effect on stimulating the release of melanin (a hormone that signals when the body should be sleepy or alert). Yellowing of the eye lens and sleep disturbances are both linked with aging as well as each other.

Sleep plays a vital part in our everyday life and affects our daily mood, performance, social life and well-being. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, located at 1937 Old Main St., Suite 1, Old Washington, we are educated, trained, and licensed to provide total care of the eyes. Total eye care includes performing comprehensive medical eye examinations, prescribing corrective lenses, diagnosing injuries and disorders of the eye, and using the appropriate medical and surgical procedures necessary for treatment. ARE YOU REGISTERED TO VOTE?

The last day to register to vote for the May 22, 2012 Primary Election is April 23, 2012. Office hours for the Mason County Clerk's Office are Monday through Friday, 8:30 am to 5:00 pm.

The Maysville Utility Commission will start flushing fire hydrants Monday, April 16, 2012. The water may become cloudy in color during the procedure and residents are asked not to wash clothes while hydrants are being flushed in their area. They should also open the cold water faucet and let it run for a short time after flushing is completed. While flushing hydrants on some streets, residents on other streets may be affected, please be aware of this. The Maysville Utility Commission understands that this is an inconvenience to residents, however this has to be done for all our protection.
